Major lakes in Arizona include: It measures miles kilometers long. Have you heard of these wonderful Arizona town, city, or crossroad names? Perhaps you can start your own list! Major Airports Arizona has an international airport in Phoenix. In , Tucson became the first U. Early History Thousands of years ago, ancient peoples inhabited Arizona. They may have originally come across a frozen bridge of land between Asia and Alaska. If so, they slowly traveled east until some settled in what would one day become the state of Arizona. The first inhabitants developed into four distinct cultures: They camped when seasons offered hunting, fishing, and fruit and nut gathering. They moved from caves to houses built in pits to those built of stone on hillsides. The tribes farmed, growing corn, beans, cotton, and squash. They also made beautiful pottery decorated with painted figures of animals and spiritual images. For some reason around , the tribes mysteriously disappeared. Early Various reasons have been given for Indians their disappearance, including diseases, enemy tribes, a severe drought, and salt deposits in their irrigation water. Sometime around , a new group moved from the Northwest into Arizona. These people were known as the Navajos. More groups moved farther south. They were called Apaches. The first Europeans known to have entered Arizona were Franciscan missionaries who came in hoping to find cities filled with gold. In , Spanish explorers came, again in search of wealth and riches. They encountered Hopi Indians, who showed them a remarkable sightâ€”the Grand Canyon! Next came Spanish missionaries who wanted to convert the Indians to Christianity. He was a attack the Spanish, burning He kind man. Since the Spanish troops had moved on, the area was easier to settle. American traders, trappers, and Settlement mountaineers moved into the land. Mexico and the United States went to war in over the land. The United States won and took The discovery of gold in California over the area extending in caused from Texas to California, many prospectors and miners to which included Arizona. Soldiers found copper ore deposits near Bisbee and Copper Douglas, but the Civil War kept them from mining there for several years. Prospectors staked out the state, even looking for mineral riches in the Mojave Desert. Some died in their search, but a few were successful. Some of the mines started by these adventurous souls are still in operation today. They also believed the Thunder God had great treasures stored there. In the s, the Spanish explorer Francisco Coronado sought the treasure. Indians would not help him, saying the Thunder God would punish those who came into his land. Coronado and his men laughed and forged ahead. Then strange things began to happenâ€”violent thunderstorms popped up; men fell off cliffs, broke bones, and some completely disappeared! The men began to think the Indians were right! They called the mountain Monte Superstition, and that is how the Superstition Mountains got their name! Another Arizona legend involves a hidden gold mine called the Lost Dutchman Mine. A German prospector named Jacob Waltz, who was called the Dutchman, claimed to have found a rich store of gold ore. Waltz died without revealing the exact location, but many have tried to find it. Some say that the gold cannot be found because it is sacred. Legends and Lore 41 Revolution Freedom! Some settlers in the New World felt that England ignored their ideas and concerns. In , the colonies went to war with England. On July 4, , the Declaration of Independence was signed. While Arizona was far removed Revolution from the action of the Revolutionary War, things were going on there, too. Tubac, an area just south of Tucson, was the site of a Spanish presidio, or military base. It was established in It had years of being abused by the settlers. The settlements were the frequent attacks of not rebuilt. This included most of Arizona. Many Americans who thought slavery was wrong were afraid the new lands would become a slave territory. Still, the lands were opened Slaves and Slavery for settling, and thousands rushed there to claim the land. In , the 13th Amendment abolished slavery in the United States. Some of the southern states began to secede leave the Union. They formed the Confederate States of America. This made President Abraham Lincoln take action. Soldiers often found themselves fighting against former friends and neighbors, even brother against brother. People have come to Arizona from other states and many other countries on almost every continent! This means that people of different races and from different cultures and ethnic backgrounds have moved to Arizona. In the past, many immigrants have come to Arizona from New Spain, which is now known as Mexico. Only a certain number of immigrants are allowed to move to America each year. Many of these immigrants eventually become U. One daughter, Mary Ann, dies, but Olive is released five years later. The town is named Oatman in honor of the family. When they try to walk out of the canyon, Paiute Indians kill them. She is cited for her heroism. This is called the Gadsden Purchase. With this act, construction begins on Theodore Roosevelt Dam. Arizonans have participated in the following wars: The Grand Canyon stretches miles kilometers , is 10 miles 16 kilometers across at its widest point, and is nearly 1 mile 1. It has been forming for 6 million years since the Colorado River began coursing through the Grand rocks, cutting out the deep gorge. Canyon The Indians, of course, were the first to see the canyon, and they showed it next to Spanish explorers. Today, more than 4 million people tour the canyon each year, and about half of these tourists are not Americans. There are a number of ways to see the canyon. One is to take a plane or helicopter ride over it. Another way is to take a mule trip down into it. There are also raft trips down the Colorado River. A number of lookout points let visitors see the beauty of the Grand Canyon. Still the coming of the standing today, it is the white man would mean an end to the oldest masonry structure way of life they had known for in the world! He discovered silver near present-day Prescott. Spanish leaders sent him in to find gold-filled cities called the Seven Cities of Cibola. De Niza reported seeing golden cities, and claimed the area for New Spain. Could de Niza have seen the golden adobe mud walls of Hawikuh and thought they were the real thing? This time in Hawikuh, it was clear there was no gold. The explorers pushed further. He claimed most of the Southwest, including Arizona, for Spain, and took back valuable minerals he collected. In , he was killed during an attack by the Yuma Indians. He used ancient Hohokam canals to irrigate surrounding farmland. In , he discovered gold in Yuma County.
