They were rich, and used their money to keep their ways from the public eye. They even attended the same church, and looked to be perfect Christians. Their pastor retired, and a new one was hired. A fund-raising campaign was started to build a new assembly. All of a sudden, one of the brothers died. The remaining brother sought out the new pastor the day before the funeral and handed him a check for the amount needed to finish paying for the new building. The next day, at the funeral, the pastor did not hold back. Jones, mother of two, was observing her children playing in the snow. She called the oldest one inside to speak to him. He plays with the sled going up the hill, and I play with it going down. Joel giggled, sang and talked out loud. Finally, his big sister had had enough. Angie pointed to the back of the church and said, "See those two men standing by the door? Three days before his return he calls his brother. So how is my cat doing? I loved that cat. You could of broke me to the news easier. You could of told me today that she got out of the house or something. Then when I call you from the airport you could of told me, The Fire Department was there and scared her off the roof and the cat died when it hit the ground. Alright, alright, forget about it. Anyway, how is Mom doing?"

This is definitely true of sisters. They have shared a vital part of your life and have been part of many smiles and tears and continue to do so throughout your lives. What better way to share something that you feel from your heart for you sister than with humor? Humor is not merely a means to amuse people but it can be smartly used to make a point and express your deepest feelings without going overboard while doing so. Many a sibling is really uncomfortable when sentiments and feelings are openly expressed. This can lead to awkward silences and confused mumblings especially when you say such things face to face. Instead you can cleverly disguise your feelings in good humor. This will put them at ease and leave them feeling good while also bringing a smile to their faces. What else could you ask for? In fact when you come to think of it, it makes a lot of sense. A punch of appreciation is more natural than a hug and kiss. So why make a emotionally wrought situation even more heavy by going the sentimental route? Use a humorous expression when you give your sister a card or gift. You can even pen down some of these lines and read them out on the eve of a family occasion. Your sister will like you even more for making her smile or laugh and putting a sparkle into the proceedings. These need not be restricted to your sisters alone, you can even use these quotations for close friends who are like family to you.
