Philosophical roots[edit] Diogenes Cosmopolitanism can be traced back to Diogenes of Sinope c. Of Diogenes it is said: The task of world citizens becomes then to "draw the circles somehow towards the centre, making all human beings more like our fellow city dwellers, and so forth". For Levinas, the foundation of ethics consists in the obligation to respond to the Other. In Being for the Other, he writes that there is no "universal moral law," only the sense of responsibility goodness, mercy, charity that the Other, in a state of vulnerability, calls forth. Ethics, he claims, is hospitality. Pure, unconditional hospitality is a desire that underscores the conditional hospitality necessary in our relationships with others. Isolation is not a feasible alternative in the world, therefore, it is important to consider how best to approach these interactions, and to determine what is at stake for ourselves and the others: Further, both theories reveal the importance of considering how best to interact with the Other and others, and what is at stake. You also have St. Paul in the Christian tradition, also a certain call for a citizen of the world as, precisely, a brother. Paul says that we are all brothers, that is sons of God, so we are not foreigners, we belong to the world as citizens of the world; and it is this tradition that we could follow up until Kant for instance, in whose concept of cosmopolitanism we find the conditions for hospitality. But in the concept of the cosmopolitical in Kant there are a number of conditions: Derrida cited in Bennington A Discussion with Jacques Derrida. A further state of cosmopolitanism occurred after the Second World War. As a reaction to the Holocaust and the other massacres, the concept of crimes against humanity became a generally accepted category in international law. This clearly shows the appearance and acceptance of a notion of individual responsibility that is considered to exist toward all of humankind. The boundaries between nations, states, cultures or societies are therefore morally irrelevant. A widely cited example of a contemporary cosmopolitan is Kwame Anthony Appiah. Globalization , a more common term, typically refers more narrowly to the economic and trade relations and misses the broader cultural, social, political, environmental, demographic, values and knowledge transitions taking place. No clean up reason has been specified. Please help improve this section if you can. February Learn how and when to remove this template message A number of contemporary theorists propose, directly and indirectly, various ways of becoming or being a cosmopolitan individual. Therefore, to be responsible is to recognize and understand suffering, which then leads to compassion. It is through this process that others can be recognized as people. Other theorists, philosophers, and activists contend that recognizing suffering is necessary to end violence. In Scared Sacred , Velcrow Ripper takes a journey to different sites of great suffering that ultimately leads him toward developing compassion. It is the deconstruction of these ideologies that can lead to the compassion and humanization of others. Thus individual responsibility is being aware of what Judith Butler calls the precariousness of life in self and other; being a cosmopolitan seems to be, above all, a social, ethical enterprise. Ethics in a World of Strangers, Kwame Anthony Appiah notices something important about how social ethics seem to operate: Whatever obligation one might have to another, especially a foreign other, that obligation does not supersede the obligations one has to those people most familiar to them. However, as Judith Butler questions, "at what cost do I establish the familiar as the criterion" for valuing others? For Gilroy, being cosmopolitan seems to involve both a social, ethical enterprise and a cultural enterprise. Both Hurdall and Corrie removed themselves geographically from their home cultures, presumably both physically and mentally estranging themselves from their own cultures and histories. Hurdall and Corrie were both killed in in separate incidents and their stories might serve as affirmations of familiarity, rather than models of estrangement. Some forms of cosmopolitanism also fail to address the potential for economic colonization by powerful countries over less powerful ones. Further, Mahmood Mamdani in Good Muslim, Bad Muslim suggests that the imposition of Western cultural norms, democracy and Christianity to name only two, has historically resulted in nationalist violence; [18] however, Appiah has implied that democracy is a pre-requisite for cosmopolitan intervention in developing nations. Now, with the advance of globalization and the increased facility of travel and communication, some thinkers consider that the political system based on the nation-state has become obsolete and that it is time to design a better and more efficient alternative. Rejecting as muddled the metaphysical notion of free will, he focuses on political freedom, the absence of coercion or interference by others in personal decisions. Because of the tendencies to violence and aggression that lurk in human nature, some constraint on freedom is necessary for peaceful and fruitful social interaction, but the more freedom we enjoy, the better. From this point of view, the Internet provides a much more attractive model than the nation-state. Neither is there any just reason for restraining the free circulation of people, ideas, or goods. He proposes a world without sovereign nation-states, territorially organized in small autonomous but not-sovereign cantonal polities, complemented by strong world organizations. Criticizing the abstract nature of most versions of cosmopolitanism, Charles Blattberg has argued that any viable cosmopolitanism must be "rooted," by which he means based upon a "global patriotism. She uses Richard Rorty as a triangulation point in that he remains neutral about multiculturalism, but his philosophical analysis of truth and practice can be deployed to argue against Searle and in favor of Taylor. Thus, rather than finding solidarity through national culture, or a particular traditional religious doctrine, society would be unified by its adherence to political values, i. Nation-state theory sees power relations only among different state actors, and excludes a global economy, or subjugates it to the nation-state model. Cosmopolitanism sees global capital as a possible threat to the nation state and places it within a meta-power game in which global capital, states and civil society are its players. For Beck, imposing a single world order was considered hegemonic at best and ethnocentric at worst. Rather, political and sociological cosmopolitanism rests upon these fundamental foundations: For Levinas, the Other is given context in ethics and responsibility; we should think of the Other as anyone and everyone outside ourselves. According to Levinas, our initial interactions with the Other occur before we form a willâ€”the ability to make choices. The Other addresses us and we respond: After the formation of the will, we choose whether to identify with the addresses by others and, as a result, continue the process of forming identity. Even in situations where we engage in the most minimal interaction, we ascribe identities to others and simultaneously to ourselves. Our dependence on the Other for the continuous formation of language, culture, and identity means that we are responsible to others and that they are responsible to us. When we have gained the capacity for recognition, the imperative is to perform that recognition and thereby become ethically responsible to the Other in conscience. However, the theory deviates in recognising the differences between world cultures. Human dignity, however, is convoluted because it is necessary to first distinguish who has the right to be respected and second to consider what rights are protectable. Under cosmopolitanism, all humans have rights; however, history shows that recognition of these rights is not guaranteed. The Powers of Mourning and Violence. Thus, there is the idea that not all "human" lives will be supported in the same way, indeed, that some human lives are worth more protection than others. Others have extended this idea to examine how animals might be reconfigured as cosmopolitan, present the world-over with varying identities in different places. Thobani notes that it is through media representations that these ideas become naturalized. Individuals who embrace Western ideals are considered fully "human" and are more likely to be afforded dignity and protection than those who defend their non-Westernized cultural identities. States would also utilize the power of civil society actors such as Non-governmental organizations NGOs and consumers to strengthen their legitimacy and enlist the help of investors to pursue a cosmopolitan agenda. These scholars argue that a truly cosmopolitan identity of Global Citizen will take hold, diminishing the importance of national identities. The formation of a global citizens movement would lead to the establishment of democratic global institutions, creating the space for global political discourse and decisions, would in turn reinforce the notion of citizenship at a global level. Nested structures of governance balancing the principles of irreducibility i. It advocates some reforms in global governance to allow world citizens to take more directly a part into political life. A number of proposals have been made in order to make this possible. Cosmopolitan democracy, for example, suggests strengthening the United Nations and other international organizations by creating a World Parliamentary Assembly. Rootless cosmopolitan "Cosmopolitanism" became a rhetorical weapon used by nationalists against "alien" ideas that went counter to orthodoxy. European Jews were frequently accused of being "rootless

Divination and Fortune Telling Divination and fortune telling have been around as long as humanity. The methods used can be as uncomplicated as scratches in the sand to the complex calculations of intricate astrological charts. Mankind has used knucklebones, entrails, sticks, stones and shells to divine the future. Even marks drawn in the dust were consulted for portents of what was to come. Later, dice and other man-made objects were used for the same purpose. Virtually anything can be used for the purpose of divination, as long as you are consistent. Over the centuries, these divinatory arts have consistently and reliably revealed the strengths and weaknesses of individuals as clearly as if the information was written in ink on their forehead. If you turn to the ancient astrological manuscripts and paths, you can see that the Yellow Earth Dog is portrayed in this way - peacefully lying down on the grass, and thoughtfully looking at the setting sun. In its eyes you can read not only the fatigue from the busy day, but also life wisdom, and a calm which brings with it the well-earned rest. The dog is thus not weary; rather, it is relaxed. The symbolism of the Yellow Dog forces us to believe that all of will pass in peaceful contemplation of the surrounding reality, in a state of emotional relaxation and tranquility. However, one cannot forget that rest and relax only start after everything that needs to be done is done, when all the everyday troubles have been brought to an end. The Dog insists that the right to rest must be earned. Let us turn once again to the symbolism of the annual cycle. The Yellow Earth Dog, symbolizing the north-western direction, is responsible for the future, for new goals which arise with deliberate reflection done after activity. The Dog is a very active creature, and the only people who will gain its favor are those who are used to working a lot, who look at the coming day with hope and are prepared to invest the most strength and energy for the sake of their peaceful tomorrow. This means that in the strong sex will feel extremely comfortable, confident and at peace. Taking into account the fact that the Yellow dog is not an extrovert, and that external vanity is not the most important thing to it, but prevalent in its own thoughts, this annual cycle will be especially energetically near for brutal men of few words, who are used to controlling what is going on independently. In , non-team players will receive additional bonuses from the Yellow Dog. As a reward for their character resilience, they will achieve great success in the area of business, economics and trade. This is more of a reference, and by following it one can understand that the outer sheen, the incomprehensible vanity, the knick-knacks, are not as valuable as the fruits of your own thinking. At many times this support will be stronger than that which the world will give to the real brutes during this yearly cycle. The fair sex should remember their own true purpose, to keep an eye on the house, the family and other important things belonging to the traditional scope of womanly care. During the current stretch, feminism will lose its relevance, and you need to get over this. According to the Chinese astrological almanac, will be the 35th cycle in the year cycle of energy regeneration. This determines the color and direction of the totem animal - the earth Dog. The color of the ruler of this year is yellow, and the season which it embodies is the end of autumn, the 9th month of the annual cycle according to the ancient Chinese calendar. The element is Earth, the color is Yellow, the taste is Bitter. The earthly branch is Hsu, the animal is the Dog, the season is the end of Autumn, and the direction is North-West. The character of the 35th cycle, which is, predetermines the third Triangle of Spiritual Affinity, which is otherwise known as the Triangle of Protectors. In this triad, the Horse and the Tiger come alongside the Dog. Each of these totem animals is responsible for a certain aspect. The Horse symbolizes wisdom, the Tiger - courage, and the Dog - protection in the Triangle of Spiritual Affinity, the Dog is assigned the role of gatekeeper. The triad of the Dog, the Tiger and the Horse bestows peace and tranquility on humanity, and so these totem beings are considered the strongest and most humane of all the representatives of the Eastern horoscope. Tranquility is the basic characteristic of the 35th cycle, and the basis of everything can line up with this tranquility, which is the most important for each individual person. It must be indicated immediately that the totem animal directing this yearly cycle has a clearly expressed conservative nature, and so will clearly not be pivotal or fateful for most people. This will be a peaceful stage, calm and smooth in all respects, which you are advised to devote to creative activity. The color yellow, the characteristic of the patron of , embodies both tranquility and conservatism. Amongst other things, yellow symbolizes ultimate clarity, sincerity and simplicity. It is precisely these qualities which will be welcomed in the year of the Yellow Dog. Yellow is responsible for optimism, more specifically this hue is attuned to optimism, infusing faith in goodness and the hope for a bright future. As is well known, the Dog is a very active creature, and so slackers and layabouts should not count on any bonuses during the period when this animal is controlling our planet. In order to avoid causing the patron of this year to become indignant, you should live in harmony with yourself and the world around you, maintaining the utmost integrity. The Dog is no supporter of risky ventures, and it will try to stop everything which is not based on honest work, but rather on cunning and self-serving calculations. By paying attention to this advice, those who like get-rich-quick schemes should get the course of their life back in line. You cannot forget that the Dog is a very humane creature, which means that it gives everyone a chance to make things right. The dog is extremely simple in its behavior, and it will promote this simplicity en masse. During , many people will make sensational discoveries for themselves, imperceptibly coming to the conclusion that it really makes no sense whatsoever to live for the show. Designer clothes, expensive purchases, or possessing any material benefits - none of this will have value in , only much deeper things will have value. First and foremost, this will be humanity, goodness, the ability to listen, to have compassion, the desire to make this world more peaceful and just. Of course, the Dog will be able to develop all of these qualities in its fosterlings. As a result, at the end of , there will be significantly less war, confrontation and conflict in the world. Peace and tranquility will settle down on each individual home. By nature the dog is an exemplary model of a family person, taking into account that the home environment has the most value. People who have decided to support this idea will secure additional support from the Yellow Dog. They will be given the opportunity to revel in the harmony within the household for all the next few months, enjoying every minute spent in the embrace of their beloved. The only condition which you will have to observe in order to do this is to say no to self-interest. Relationships which entail cold calculation by one of the partners will be faced with the disdain of the ruler of this year. As a result, relationships which are based on self-interest and not love are doomed to fail in . And this totem animal knows more than most about friendship, and it is not without reason that the dog is considered the animal which embodies loyalty. In , support will be received by everyone who is open to committed friendship, new partnerships, based not on submission but on the principles of equality. However, if we talk about partnerships in the business sphere, everything is not so straightforward. In the year of the Dog, people who independently move towards the top of the business or career can expect the most success. That is, a partnership started this year should be perceived as an aid towards potential victories, but certainly not as a way to achieve them. On the whole, the Dog, being a diligent and active creature, will actively support workaholics, businessmen and careerists. In the area of production will be the most in demand. This being the case, everything which the down-to-earth is not able to understand too well will not remain outside its sphere of interest. The Dog is far from strong in these areas, but it really respects people who are vested with great talents. It guarantees them calm and the absence of special hardships, by creating the most durable basis for intellectual and creative activity. In order to strengthen your financial standing, it will be enough to work systematically, forgetting about a haughty, contemplative attitude towards this world. During this time, honest entrepreneurs and careerists who are not inclined towards behind-the-scenes intrigues, will finally gain a major victory, which can be measured with a monetary equivalent. The Dog does not understand ridiculous bragging, which means that those forward thinking people who direct their capital not towards the purchase of unjustifiable luxury, but towards something more important to building a house, buying new property or developing their own personal business will prove to be right. This calm and in all respects steady stage should be devoted to the creative activity. The Dog willing supports everyone who undertakes to create love, tries to create harmony in the home, has sound friendships, develops their own personal business, with charity and other things based on the utmost integrity and humanness. It will be quite easy to gain the favor of the Yellow Dog. All that will be needed for this is to cultivate within yourself decency, goodness and humane treatment of people.

The winning team gets a prize and the losing teams does the tidying up afterwards. Guess the Memory Get everyone to anonymously write down a personal memory of themselves with the bride-to-be. All the memories then get put into a hat and the hen has to read them aloud and guess who wrote it. You can then paste all the memories in a book and give it to the hen as a heartfelt present. I Hope You Do How about something sentimental? Ask everyone to find a chair, supply them with a glass of sparkling and have them spend 10 minutes filling out what they hope and wish for for the bride to be on a little card. As in Guess the Memory, these cards can be read out aloud and then pasted in a book for the hen.

Representatives of this Chinese sign are characterized by narcissism, bordering on narcissism, which is absolutely unacceptable for the Dog. In order to avoid provoking the anger of the four-legged mistress of , Rats will have to profoundly reassess their behavioral tactics. This reassessment will imply a complete renunciation of everything which representatives of this sign made active use of in the past. During the year of the Yellow Dog, Rats will have to become the authors of their own fates, completely independent people, boldly looking at their upcoming day, and not expecting any help from anyone else. The Dog, for its part, will present you with the opportunity to carry out this adaptation stage in peace. You should devote this time to intentional self-discovery, by finding within yourself precisely the characteristics which are in need of reconstruction. The analysis carried out during the current stretch lies at the basis of your new plan for life, the primary vector of which will be the pure fight for success, and not the search for ways to carry out cunning maneuvers. The earlier you make a new life plan, the more productive the end of this annual cycle will be for you. The Dog is pleased by friendship and partnership, and so make an effort to maintain warm relations with your friends or colleagues at work by all means. You will also have to understand this in matters relating to your romantic relationships. Equality is an effective mechanism, which will lead your marriage to complete harmony. It will be solely up to you to decide how to achieve equality specifically in your family. On the whole, by giving advice to each Rat, the next landmark can be determined, first and foremost, renounce your inherent egoism. In you will have to ask yourself - when last did you show an interest in your marriage partner? The answer to this question will probably surprise you and motivate you to make serious changes within your home. At home, alone with your life companion, try to understand as deeply as possible what they are living for, what plans and goals are particularly relevant to them. In the year of the Yellow Dog, you will have every opportunity to start to write your family biography from scratch, so for this reason you should make a bit of an effort. Yes, the ruler of this year is quite strict, but it is not opposed to the active interaction between the sexes. Secondly, having taken it upon yourself to conquer the person you are interested in, act with integrity, without the intrigues or cunning manipulations which are so dear to you. On the whole, in Rats will be given the right to major success in the most different areas of life. If you want to make a breakthrough in your career, achieve grandiose victories in the business sphere or do serious science, go for it! Everything will definitely work out for you, if you demonstrate objectivity and sanity. Everything which you will be able to achieve at the end of the day, will be the result of your own personal efforts. This is why it would be right to make yourself a strict plan which correlates clearly to your opportunities and ambitions. If some of these ambitions prove to be disproportionately high, and you doubt whether you will ever be able to achieve them, stop where you are. How much more logical and wise would the course of your life be if at first you conquered a small hill, and only then tried to start conquering Everest? By acting slowly, gradually, approaching success one step after another, you will be significantly further than you originally planned. There is a good chance that already during the second half of the year of the Dog you will be able to increase your regular income, which will take place once again not by a happy coincidence, but thanks to your own efforts. Your budget will be bolstered by a bigger salary, which you will get by doing a prestigious job, or by profit, which your own business will start to bring in after a skilfully tested upgrade. The growth in profit will, of course, be to your liking, but it will only be an insignificant bonus, a trifle compared to what you could receive if you continue to work as productively from now on. That is, everything you achieve in , is a peculiar advance, which you need to manage properly, extracting the maximum profit. Rats naturally spend money on luxury and on leisure, but when the world is ruled by the Dog, you will have to become more serious when it comes to financial matters.

Another thing which the ruler of this annual cycle will not like is the Rat's inclination to act surreptitiously, waiting for a convenient opportunity to bring about its own self-serving goals with the help of cunning or lies.
