They knew it just like today we all know that every time we put a gallon of gas into our car we are pumping out 20 pounds of CO2 into the atmosphere that is wrecking our home. But we choose not to think about it now, just as they chose not to think about it then. And in 80 years we will be denying that we ever thought about it now just as they did then. It is incomprehensible and defies believability to think people did not know. Did the average citizen know every detail, well, of course not. I have been to Dachau, Auschwitz-Birkenau, and Maidanek, and my conclusions are the same as yours. Thank you for your comments. Nancy Welsh 9 months ago I have been to Mauthausen Austria. The one thing that struck me after visiting the camp and town which was about 1. Along the route and surrounding the camp were farms. However, I have never talked with any resident so I do not know their stories. According to liberators of Mauthausen, civilians were ordered to come to the camp, wearing their Sunday best clothes. General Eisenhower ordered they should bury bodies in this camp and other camps. There are online photos of civilians doing this at Mauthausen. It seems to me that Eisenhower recognized complicity. What a horrid time in history. I feel so bad for the Jews. So bad AUTHOR Theresa Ast 10 months ago from Atlanta, Georgia I would be inclined to take what you have written more seriously if, you provided some information about yourself, age, educations, etc, AND you provided the sources you are using to gather information for your response. Without sources you will not be taken seriously by most educated people. My daughter is studying abroad and just visited two weeks ago. From what she told me, it sounds like they have updated the museum and the tour. There was no film when I visited. She was profoundly moved by the museum and the film and is so grateful she had the opportunity to visit. To your point, she told me that on her tour, they were told that the Dachau townspeople knew that Dachau was a work prison and she was shown propaganda posters distributed by the Germans showing strong, well fed, sturdy prisoners to make the locals believe that it was a legitimate, humane prison and not a death camp. She also said that the film showed the residents of Dachau hysterically crying when they were forced to see what actually went on and profusely claiming that they had no idea that those atrocities were taking place there. And if they did, were they protecting their own families from such possibility? I found your comment very interesting that you always remind your students that the rebels and detractors were almost always those who were single or who had already lost their families. That is an interesting and important fact. Thank you for sharing your research and knowledge about this subject. MaxxMurxx 2 years ago We live in a time of mass communication. Read my comment below and tell me, what YOU knew about it. My German parents were born in and Around them many children were still dying from malnutrition caused by the British Hunger Blockade. That blockade, already a war crime during the war, became a crime against humanity after on Nov. Not so the British, who carried out what was published in the British Medical Journal of Those experiences were gathered by British Physicians during the Bengal famines, where the British Empire deliberately had starved "some Millions" of Indians. As a consequence the British Navy shot even on German fish trawlers in German coastal waters. The Balfour declaration offered Palestine to the Zionists for settlements. The German Foreign secretary and financial deputy of the German Zionist Association, Arthur Zimmermann, priorly had sent his bogus Zimmermann telegram, which enabled Woodrow Wilson in May to declare war against Germany. The German population however was held as hostage for the immense reparation payments, as only soldiers, half the size of the Army of Switzerland, Switzerland being smaller than the City of New York, had been allowed to protect them, even civilian air shelters were not allowed to be built. That pillage and plundering of the German nation, based on a contract, being enforced by genocide and the hostage situation enforced on the German people made the next generation elect the one who stood up against that crime without precedent and when they lost their fight, psychological warfare made them accepting to be guilty of all crimes committed against themselves. Concerning their "knowledge" of atrocities in the East it must be kept in mind that concentration camps frequently had been closed for quarantine, due to typhus. Those surviving typhs have a short phase of horror trip like hallucinations, which contrary to all other psychotic or schizophrenic memories are stored in the memory of reality. As long as historians do not comment which of those have been real and which have been hallucination, forgive me not discussing that subject. From there was a Polish Brigade attached to the British Army, with their own officers and NCOs, and they took part in the invasion of Italy as well as of France from Stretcher bearers were sent for, to take him to the nearest first aid post or military hospital. When they arrived they bent down to lift him onto the stretcher. Russians who captured SS soldiers hanged them straight away. The French offered an alternative. Either they could enlist in the Foreign Legion or die there and then. Many ex-SS were killed in the French war in the Far East with the Viet Minh [that snippet of information comes from a book I read that followed the fortunes of one after he was captured in Alsace]. Hard to even imagine. What you say about Churchill and the British public makes sense. There are plenty of documents that make it clear that FDR and the State Department new the nature of the catastrophe in Europe quite sometime before information began to filter out to the general public. The British public was generally aware that the Nazis had demonised the Jews. I agree with you. Thank you so much for commenting and I am sorry for not responding a long, long time ago. That went down like a stone balloon, you can believe. Many Germans who lived near the camps were willing to put their knowledge of them out of their thoughts from fear of being put there themselves. However, even with an active Underground, by May most were complicit in what went on. One Jewish survivor said that when he was on a cattle train bound for Poland he begged for water from a passer-by when they stopped inside Germany. I am very slow in responding, I fell and injured my knee two weeks ago and have spent the last two weeks in a wheelchair or trying to hobble around with a walker. X-rays, MRIs and so forth, but I am on the road to recovery now. Mvd - Sometimes I heard my mom or grand dad, or neighbors sort of whisper about things they had heard that were going on. Mind you, at that time, no one had TV to spread the word. Dachau was far away from where we lived. The world must not forget that Hitler and his cohorts conducted a lot of their operations in secrecy. TLA " I always emphasize to my students that Europe was a different world then, no internet, no TV, radio and newspapers largely controlled by the Nazis. And much was done in secret, which explains why six Death Camps were established in Poland. Mvd - If some townsfolk around Dachau suspected anything -and perhaps they did, hence the stench from the ovens and other ominous signs- will anyone please tell me what an individual or even a group could have done? Hitler held absolute power, and it took the combined power of the allies to destroy him. TLA - I think it was very difficult to do very much. But we should not believe or pretend that it was impossible. That would be a great injustice to the many people who did oppose Hitler and the Nazis, who created undergrounds, made crude weapons, and did try to rescue and help others escape. They did exist and many of them paid with their lives. Mvd - Some brave individuals had tried to assassinate Hitler, notably Hohenstaufen. If you ever care to read about them, you will find out about their fate too. To put my work in perspective, what you read was a short excerpt from a page dissertation I wrote 15 years ago. Since then I have been teaching Western Civilization, and the Holocaust at a small university. You, as Americans, look at your own recent history, when a certain president invaded an innocent country and bombed the h Are you all taking the blame for it? TLA - Interesting comparison. And yes, in newspapers, magazines, world opinion and the international press we have had to take the blame for it. Even though so many of us never voted for that president and did not support his actions. Yes, we have been blamed and we probably should be. We should have done more, protested, spoken up, created a huge political outcry. Both of our countries have things for which we should be ashamed not personally in a general sense. We can only hope that we will get better at resisting wrong headed government intentions before it is too late. My father, who, by the way, was NOT a Nazi, was drafted into the army to fight for Hitler, as did every other young man, Nazi or not. Needless to say he got killed when I was six months old also needless to say that no one could hate Hitler more than I. Sometimes I heard my mom or grand dad, or neighbors sort of whisper about things they had heard that were going on. If some townsfolk around Dachau suspected anything -and perhaps they did, hence the stench from

Grave pictures from TV documentary. He was soon joined by a sister, Angela Raubal. After working as an apprentice waiter, he was arrested for theft and served a five-month sentence in , followed by an eight-month sentence in . Meanwhile his stepmother Klara had died of breast cancer, age 47, on and only two weeks later on his father Alois Sr. Both are buried on the small cemetery of Leonding, behind their former house. He changed his name in Stuart Houston. The family lived in a flat at Upper Stanhope Street. Ironically, the house was destroyed in the last German air-raid on Liverpool on . Nothing remains of the house or those that surrounded it, and the area was eventually cleared and grassed over. Alois attempted to make money by running a small restaurant in Dale Street, a boarding house on Parliament Street and a hotel on Mount Pleasant, all of which failed. Finally, he left his family in May and he returned alone to the German Empire to establish himself in the safety-razor business. World War I broke out soon after, stranding Alois in Germany and making it impossible for his wife and son to join him. After the war, a third party informed Bridget that he was dead. William Patrick stayed with Alois and his new family during his early trips to Weimar Republic Germany in the late s and early s. Blog Gesche joined the Nazi party in when he was only 17 and first met Hitler in Berlin a short time afterwards. Gesche was known as a ruthless brawler and intimidating to Nazi opponents. Himmler intrigued against Gesche and sent him to the Russian front in. Incredibly, Hitler intervened and summoned Gesche back to his side. But when Bruno fell off the wagon with a thud, Himmler dumped him to Italy and Gesche surrendered to the Americans in. He agreed only to discuss Hitler as a private man and incidents relating to Hitler personally. Gesche refers to Hitler as der Chef the boss. The boss liked music and art. What he and I talked about were engines, car engines. He knew everything about cars, engines, performance. He was a car nut like me so we talked about that mostly. I practically never drove his car, the main car had the driver, Hitler in the companion seat and Julius Schaub, and another adjutant in the seats. Heinrich Hoffmann, his photographer, me and a few others drove in the second vehicle. That was better for security. We were always on guard for attacks. They must have been. It was meant for him personally not the Party. None of them were National Socialists even if they were members of the Party. Real thick and these old rich ladies ate that all up like a cow herd coming to a salt lick. I got so sick of seeing this I would just leave when he visited these women. You believe Hitler actually had a sexual relationship with Frau Bechstein? You asked me, I answered. She was in love with him and was just loaded. Have you ever seen how much a Bechstein piano costs? They cost a fortune. If Hitler had to service her once in awhile to keep the cash flowing, why not? Did you like him? Yes, but he was my leader, my boss, he was the light for the future. I make no apologies then or now and never will. I revered him, I would have given my life for him in a moment. Everyone around him felt the same. As a man, we had little in common but I admired his intelligence, strength of character and of course, the way he spoke. No public speaker who ever lived could best him. He was like a Messiah. Did you know Maria Reiter? I spoke to her a few times. Oh God, she was a beauty. What can you tell me about Geli Raubal, the much-loved niece? Did you know her? Sure, she was always around Hitler for several years before she killed herself. He even let her travel with us when we were on the road, though not in the main colonnade. As for Geli, she was not blonde like books say now. She was not the ideal Aryan type that Hitler usually ran after. But she wanted what she wanted and was spoiled rotten by the boss. I knew him well, he had the tendency to exaggerate his affairs. Hitler met Eva Braun in October, Yes, that sounds right, I do know Geli died in the summer of, some big dates like that stick in my brain. Hitler noticed Eva early on, he liked to drop in to see her. He called her mein Schatzerl, which indicated he was attracted, he liked what he saw. All of us liked looking at her, she had two legs which I really liked looking at. Her legs were dynamite. Even an old man has his memories. She saw Hitler often enough, though maybe not in the war years. He spent a lot of time away from Berlin and he was with her then. Little Eva had to accept he was not an ordinary man, she knew this. Hell, she had an enviable life to most women. He was the big prize and she had him. That says plenty right there.

Share3 Shares John F. He was a financial genius and a political power player. He was one of the richest men of the world, a man who had the political and financial power to affect the lives of millions. He was also, however, a man of questionable ethics. He made dirty deals in his professional life and even dirtier ones in private. Today, the father is outshined by the son, and we often see Joseph Kennedy as nothing more than a footnote in the story of JFK. He got rich by working hard and making smart decisions, but he turned that wealth into a fortune by cheating on the stock market. Kennedy turned the stock market into a gold mine by using tricks that, today, are illegal. He used insider trading, created artificial scarcities to drive up stocks, and sold other ones short to drive them down. He knew what he was doing. Kennedy criminalized insider trading, making it a crime to use the very tricks that made him his fortune. James Abbe Joseph Kennedy married Rose Fitzgerald in and, almost immediately, started cheating on her. At one point, he took Rose and Gloria both on vacation to Europe and made his wife watch while fooled around with the other woman. Rose kept a stoic face. She knew of the affairs. Even her children knew what was happening. Wikimedia When Prohibition came into effect, rumors that Kennedy was a rum runner spread wildly. Allegations came from everywhere. And a piano tuner working for Al Capone claimed that he saw Kennedy sit down with whiskey baron to talk business. None of these stories have ever been proven, but we do know some things for sure. In , Kennedy kept the liquor flowing at his Harvard 20th reunion. And, when Prohibition ended, Kennedy already had a whole stock of liquor ready to sell across the country. One way or another, though, Kennedy was a businessman. Whether he started selling liquor during Prohibition or after, he saw a business opportunity and capitalized on it. Look what they did to Hollywood. He was just worried that too much violence would turn public opinion against Hitler. Kennedy had his own plan. He tried to set up a program that would have shipped every Jew in Germany to Africa, or, at least, to a British or American colony. He agreed with Hitler all the way. Someone they could toss out to boost morale. He called for America to make a peace pact with Hitler. In England, he tried to keep Winston Churchill out of office, hoping Neville Chamberlain would make an alliance with Germany. He tried to get approval to meet with Hitler personally twice. He stopped Kennedy both times. England, he believed, was only fighting Germany so that they could stay alive. Kennedy was sure that America was being run by Jews. Kennedy was supposed to be serving the state. Instead, he was spreading anti-Semitic conspiracy theories and publicly supporting Hitler. In , Kennedy was forced to resign as ambassador. His political career was over. Wikimedia With his own political ambitions smashed, Kennedy turned to his sons. One of them, he was determined, would become president. There was only one liability: Officially, Rosemary had been diagnosed as mentally handicapped, but modern psychiatrists think she was just depressed. Either way, she had to calm down. But the name was never mentioned. United Press When he ran for president, John F. It put JFK in a difficult position. Kennedy ran for congress and won. Allegedly, Kennedy paid a custodian whose name was also Joe Russo to run in the election. Cheating rumors floated up against when JFK ran for president. They were words that would shape his character. They were open about it.

The only queen who actually ruled Britain during Hitler's lifetime was Victoria who died in when Hitler was 11 years old. The Kaiser of Germany during Hitler's early life from to - Wilhelm II - was Queen Victoria's grandson by her eldest daughter.

When his new teacher asked his name to enter in her roll book , he said "J. The name stuck, and he was known as Jesse Owens for the rest of his life. Throughout his life, Owens attributed the success of his athletic career to the encouragement of Charles Riley, his junior high school track coach at Fairmount Junior High School. Since Owens worked in a shoe repair shop after school, Riley allowed him to practice before school instead. They dated steadily through high school. Ruth gave birth to their first daughter, Gloria, in They remained married until his death in When he traveled with the team, Owens was restricted to ordering carry-out or eating at "blacks-only" restaurants. Similarly, he had to stay at "blacks-only" hotels. Owens did not receive a scholarship for his efforts, so he continued to work part-time jobs to pay for school. He equaled the world record for the yard dash 9. Crepeau chose these wins on one day as the most impressive athletic achievement since In the months prior to the Games, a movement gained momentum in favor of a boycott. Owens arrived at the new Olympic stadium to a throng of fans, according to fellow American sprinter James LuValle who won the bronze in the meters , many of them young girls yelling "Wo ist Jesse? On August 4, he won the long jump with a leap of 8. He later credited this achievement to the technical advice that he received from Luz Long , the German competitor whom he defeated. Owens set the world record in the long jump with a leap of 8. Coincidentally, Owens was a spectator at the Summer Olympics in Rome when Boston took the gold medal in the long jump. The long-jump victory is documented, along with many other events, in the film Olympia by Leni Riefenstahl. On August 1, , Hitler shook hands with the German victors only and then left the stadium. International Olympic Committee president Henri de Baillet-Latour insisted that Hitler greet every medalist or none at all. Hitler opted for the latter and skipped all further medal presentations. Owens responded to these claims at the time: Hitler had a certain time to come to the stadium and a certain time to leave. It happened he had to leave before the victory ceremony after the meters [race began at 5: But before he left I was on my way to a broadcast and passed near his box. He waved at me and I waved back. Vann describes witnessing Hitler "salute" Owens for having won gold in the m sprint August 3: I looked on with a heart which beat proudly as the lad who was crowned king of the meters event, get an ovation the like of which I have never heard before. I saw Jesse Owens greeted by the Grand Chancellor of this country as a brilliant sun peeped out through the clouds. I saw a vast crowd of some 85, or 90, people stand up and cheer him to the echo. People whose antecedents came from the jungle were primitive, Hitler said with a shrug; their physiques were stronger than those of civilized whites and hence should be excluded from future games. Naoto Tajima , Owens, Lutz Long. Mischner claimed that Owens showed him the photograph and told him: The consensus was that Hitler had to continue to be painted in a bad light in relation to Owens. I thought this was the last chance to set the record straight. I have no idea where the photo is or even if it exists still. Owens paid it little mind until the parade concluded. But I tell you, Hitler did not snub me. I am not knocking the President. Remember, I am not a politician, but remember that the President did not send me a message of congratulations because, people said, he was too busy. From the air, fast down, and from the ground, fast up. Owens decided to capitalize on his success by returning to the United States to take up some of the more lucrative endorsement offers. United States athletic officials were furious and withdrew his amateur status, which immediately ended his career. Owens was angry, saying, "A fellow desires something for himself. Racism was still prevalent in the United States, and he had difficulty finding work. He took on menial jobs as a gas station attendant, playground janitor, and manager of a dry cleaning firm. He also raced against amateurs and horses for cash. In , he briefly toured with a twelve-piece jazz band under contract with Consolidated Artists but found it unfulfilling. He also made appearances at baseball games and other events. He later became a director, where he worked until He would give local sprinters a ten- or twenty-yard start and beat them in the yd m dash. Owens said, "People say that it was degrading for an Olympic champion to run against a horse, but what was I supposed to do? Not for a black man, anyway. In , he was successfully prosecuted for tax evasion. The government appointed him as a US goodwill ambassador. Owens traveled the world and spoke to companies such as the Ford Motor Company and stakeholders such as the United States Olympic Committee. When you open it, you have nothing but fingers â€” weak, empty fingers. Four years later in his book I Have Changed, he revised his opinion: Owens traveled to Munich for the Summer Olympics as a special guest of the West German government. He argued that the Olympic ideal was supposed to be observed as a time-out from war and that it was above politics. He died of the disease at age 66 in Tucson, Arizona , on March 31, , with his wife and other family members at his bedside. AP Athlete of the Year Male [73] One of the trees was planted at the University of Southern California, one at Rhodes High School in Cleveland, where he trained, and one is rumored to be on the Ohio State University campus but has yet to be identified.

No, but I knew someone who saw him. Back in the 80s we had a German teacher, in our school in Ireland. One day, the subject of the war came up.

Her unique knowledge of Hitler and Eva Braun remained sadly unexploited. Aside from Nerin E. This portion of the interview I have eliminated. I will quote only the salient portions relating to Hitler and Eva Braun. The interview begins below this photo of Eva and Gretl Braun: Can you remember when you first met Adolf Hitler? I was very young, it must have been What were the circumstances of this meeting? I noticed him, I knew who he was because he was very up-and-coming. People in Munich talked a lot about him. Was Eva Braun with you at this encounter? Did you know at this time of his relationship with your sister? I knew Eva was acquainted with him, I knew they went out together sometimes, but it was nothing serious at that time. When did you first meet Adolf Hitler? Or when did you first speak to him? This I recall very definitely. It was Hoffmann that introduced us, Eva was not there. What were you doing in there by yourself? I was fetching some wine and rolls for some friends. I had been in there before, it was a quiet, nice Italian place. What impression did Hitler make on you? He was friendly and polite. He smiled, bowed a little bit. He did not kiss my hand. Did he ask you to join him? During this time, what did your sister talk to you about concerning Hitler? You have to recall this was very early days. He lived in Munich but this was a tumultuous period, he was not around all the time. Eva never discussed him with you? Well yes, she did, but there was not a love affair between them yet. That developed very slowly, Hitler was very circumspect and private. What was the catalyst that propelled your sister into a relationship with him? The death of his niece. There was certainly never a romance between them until the niece shot and killed herself. That was an enormous scandal, all of Munich were talking about it. Even my father mentioned it, my friends at school, things like that. Was your sister already in love with Hitler when Geli died? That is hard to say, Eva was never effusive about her feelings. She was very much different than me in that respect. I could never could have kept my mouth closed about a romantic affair, but she could and she did. It was a big determining factor in Hitler settling down with her. He valued that tremendously. When did you know she was in love with him? I knew because she would be gone from our parents apartment at night. And then what happened? Nothing, Eva was stealthy and quiet. She would blandly lie to our parents, saying she was working late or helping Herr Hoffmann. We shared a bedroom, so I knew of her comings and goings. So your sister would sneak away to see Hitler and you knew about it? I finally asked her if she was seeing Hitler. At first she was reluctant to answer, but then told me she was indeed seeing him. She was very attached to him and this happened from their first private meetings. She fell very hard for him from the get go. And she told you it had become an intimate relationship? She started hiding things in our room. Personal garments, contraceptives, letters, things that a romantic young girl does during her first love affair. She was having an affair, even I knew that and I was only 16 or 17 myself. Did Hitler ever come to your parents house? He did drop off Eva after their evenings together, or at least he did so usually. My parents suspected absolutely nothing. My sister was, as I said, very careful, very prudent, and very silent about her time with Hitler. Did she stay away all evening? Shortly after the death of his niece, Eva went away for several days. She developed some photos, she was a very passionate photographer, you know. They were of Hitler on the Berg. He took her to the Berghof this early on? It was the house he had up there before it was transformed into the Berghof. I thought he ruined the cozy old place when he added so much to it. But yes, she was up there with him and stayed days at a time. Was Eva enthusiastic about Hitler? You have to bear in mind, this was a different time and place. I knew she loved him, and she made this abundantly plain to me years later. At that time, in the early days, it was only at his invitation. This is all before he gained power, he was away all the time. He was, I think, the first German politician who travelled by air, that was unheard of in those days. Eva also could talk to him on the telephone at the house of her friend, Herta Ostemeyer. Her parents had some money, they had a long-distance telephone line. How often did he take your sister to the mountains? That was more or less a constant thing, even early on. Hitler would send one of his cars and have one of his men drive her up to the Berg. It amazes me even now how well she pulled all that off so that so few knew anything. Did Hitler take Eva on dates? Early on, definitely he did. Before he became Chancellor, he would take her to dinner, to the opera, to a movie, things like that. But they never went alone, there were always people around, Then he would take her back to his apartment where they could be alone. What other people were around? Hitler hated new faces around him, he absolutely hated it. He wanted an unvarying routine. But Maya was not a prostitute. Well, our older sister, Ilse, was the one who found her. I was not in Munich, but attending a funeral of the father of one of my friends. Eva shot herself, or tried to, and missed the mark. She grazed her chest with the bullet, but apparently there was a lot of blood. Why would a young, pretty girl do this? Because of Hitler, of course. He had been neglecting her, his calls were getting infrequent. Not at that point yet. Hitler came around and gave her flowers and a card and explained he was very, very busy. Did anything change after he became Chancellor?

Chapter 9 : Hitler Alois Jr, born Matzelsberger, later Hiller, - WW2 Gravestone

There was a short story I read where there had been so many time travelers attempting to, and had, killed Hitler, only to end up with things being worse (ie. having competent Nazis, like Heinrich and Rommel, take over), that other time travelers had to go back and undo the damage.

The charges have been fueling a recent wave of attacks against Israelis in and around Jerusalem. Israel has repeatedly denied allegations that it wishes to change the status quo on the Mount, which houses the Al-Aqsa Mosque and is holy to both Jews and Muslims. As per the status quo, Jews may visit the Temple Mount but not pray there. In fact, hundreds of thousands of Jews had been killed by the Nazis and their collaborators by the time of the meeting. Other commentators pointed out that Hitler had discussed the possible extermination of European Jewry as early as , even before World War II began and certainly before he met with Hussein. The Wannsee Conference, held in on January 20, , came after the meeting between Hitler and Hussein. The theory that Hussein played a role in the origin of the plan to commit genocide against the Jews has been raised by a number of historians including David Dalin and John Rothmann, but the notion has been rejected by a vast majority of Holocaust scholars. Because, God forbid, they would come here. Rather that they would be annihilated, burned, there. No one will teach me what a hater of Israel the mufti was. This is not part of the doctorate of [Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud] Abbas [which accused the Zionist movement of collaborating with Nazism and played down the extent of the Holocaust]. Joint Arab List party leader Ayman Odeh accused Netanyahu of distorting history in order to incite against the Palestinian people. He is changing the history of the Jews. In a statement to reporters on Wednesday afternoon, as he prepared to head to Berlin, Netanyahu asserted that his comments had been misconstrued. I had no intention to absolve Hitler of responsibility for his diabolical destruction of European Jewry. Hitler was responsible for the Final Solution to exterminate six million Jews. It is equally absurd to ignore the role played by the Mufti, Haj Amin al-Husseini, a war criminal, for encouraging and urging Hitler, Ribbentrop, Himmler and others, to exterminate European Jewry. The importance of his role must not be ignored. The Mufti repeatedly proposed to the authorities, primarily Hitler, Ribbentrop and Himmler, to exterminate the Jews of Europe. He considered it a suitable solution for the Palestinian question. Many other researchers cite this testimony and others regarding the role of Haj Amin al-Husseini. Unfortunately, Haj Amin al-Husseini is still a revered figure in Palestinian society. He appears in textbooks and it is taught that he is one of the founding fathers of the nation, and this incitement that started then with him, inciting the murder of Jews “ continues. Not in the same format, but in a different one, and this is the root of the problem. To stop the murders, it is necessary to stop the incitement. What is important is to recognize the historical facts and not ignore them, not then and not today.
