

Chapter 1 : Boatright, Ethics and the Conduct of Business | Pearson

Ethics and Law for School Psychologists is the single best source of authoritative information on the ethical and legal issues school psychologists face every day. Designed specifically to meet the unique needs of psychologists in school settings, this book includes the most up-to-date standards and requirements while providing an introduction.

This feature at the end of each chapter is based on interviews conducted with ethics counselors within the professional organizations for health care practitioners and interviews with bioethics experts. The discussion questions are derived from real-life experiences and ethical dilemmas and will help students clarify their personal ethical viewpoint concerning each situation. Each case study is presented to help students practice critical thinking skills and use knowledge gained from the chapter to decide how to resolve the real-life situations or theoretical scenarios presented. Each activity includes exercises that are designed to increase knowledge about topics related to the chapter material and to gain expertise in using the Internet as a research tool. Keep a resource notebook to record useful Web sites as they are found. To locate new Web sites, conduct a subject search as needed to help you answer the questions that follow each activity. This feature opens each chapter with a real-life experience related to the main topic of the chapter. Health care practitioners in various locations throughout the United States describe problems or situations they encounter relevant to the material discussed in the chapter. Presented throughout the chapter to allow students to test their comprehension on sections of the chapter as they progress through it. Each case summarizes a law suit that illustrates points made in the chapter. Students are encouraged to determine why the court made its particular ruling and to consider the relevance of the case to their health care specialty area. The legal citations at the end of each court case indicate where to find the complete text of a case. Each chapter offers an engaging video. Here are a few example: Cousin of a medical professional asks for drug samples. Medical professional decides whether to skip wearing gloves to expedite treatment. The learning outcomes describe the basic knowledge that should be acquired by studying the Chapter.
