About Us Helping brands create solutions for the future. Design Central is a product design and engineering consultancy that brings power to organizations by identifying opportunities for compelling solutions through research, design, user experience and engineering. By applying the full spectrum of innovation, we get answers to clients faster and easier and with better-targeted solutions. Our integrated methodology ensures that insights are gained at every step of the process, each building on the last. These insights emerge through visually stunning designs that converge with manufacturable execution. Should debates get noisy, Adam falls right back into his comfort zone – that of the peacemaker. Beyond just being used to the chaos, Adam draws on his years of experience as a yoga practitioner to help keep things balanced. If you could write the perfect backstory for an industrial designer, it might go something like this: Honestly, was there ever any question? Brian Semon When everyone zigs, Brian zigs harder! Brian is a bit of an anomaly around here: Calin Solomon Calin is a master problem solver both in the studio and at home. He loves any challenge for his critical thinking engineering skills to unravel and is always visualizing outlining, drafting, scoping out what he can improve upon next – another customized model kit creation, gizmos for various needs, or even the hovercraft he made, capable of carrying a regular sized adult! It may not surprise you that someone who grew up abroad loves to travel. Just in the last year Calin has explored the North England coast, visited the Caribbean, and road tripped through Europe! Caterina Rizzoni Cat is, at heart, a dreamer and an idealist. She believes fundamentally in empathetic, human-centered design, and her education in CoDesign and generative design research gave her the tools to apply these ideals to the products she brings to life. Cat loves whipping up delicious Italian-American dishes inspired by her childhood, spent part-time in Ohio and part-time in Italy. She can even make pasta from scratch! Chad Bigler Chad is a lover of techie gear and often tackles IT issues with a single click. While he may not have all the answers, he sure knows how to ask the right questions half the battle and where to find the solutions the other half. Find yourself tied down by an insurmountable problem while a deadline fast approaches? Chad to the rescue! Business suits are hardly the norm here. In fact, word on the street is that he did a bit of modeling in his single days. Chris Brown With years of experience in design research, leadership, operations, and marketing, Chris came uniquely equipped with the perfect set of tools to tackle any challenge. Contract negotiations are a given; mapping product strategy, one of his passions. As for volunteer and leadership experience, after only five years of becoming an active member, he was elected as a national Board member and District Vice President of IDSA. In his spare time, Chris is heavily involved in local entrepreneur events and leadership skills, culture, keeping an eye on the comedy world, and being a dad. Thank goodness he is a coffee connoisseur – otherwise who knows how he would keep up! Cori Rowley Cori is, at heart, a problem solver. Adept with colors and handwork, she uses her well-honed industrial design skills to work through tough challenges, no matter the project. Not content to stop when the work day is done, she now continues her passion for creating and remaking things with her hands in a workshop she shares with her husband. These two are quite a pair, having taught themselves to make custom furniture, restore vintage tools such as antique axes, hatchets, and tomahawks, as well as handcrafted leather goods. Diana Juratovac Diana revels in a sense of accomplishment, both at the end of the work day and after completing one of her fused glass art pieces at home. Diana is known for her unique sense of style, garnering compliments left and right on her cool ensembles. Francesca Rico Frankie is her name and visual analysis is her game! A problem solver since she was little, Frankie found her calling during her first year of design school. She tells stories with her work by crafting memorable, effective user-based solutions. Frankie also has a passion for motion and kinetic design, and is excited to communicate in new, interactive ways. Frankie says some ideas are limited due to the static realm in which they are created. This places him in the role of a visionary-realist here at Design Central. He helps envision the dreams and possibilities of new endeavors while keeping an eye toward making those dreams a reality – and boy, do our clients appreciate him for that! Need to get up to speed on the world of fishing, golf or, well – pretty much anything? Jay is the man! Good thing it is our business, Jay hits the ground running project after project. Jeff DeBord Jeff is a guy who knows how to get the job done. He is very focused on the importance of budgets and commitments, but still makes time to have fun with those around him. Give Jeff a call! How about dental stools or kitchen appliances? Jeff is your man! Jessica Cirola With 16 years of accounting experience and a serious go-getter attitude, Jessica came into Design Central hungry to learn and ready to crunch some numbers. Jessica loves accounting and its checks and balances; with no gray areas, there is always a solution to be found. Louise Nunley When Louise joined the Design Central team we knew she felt great satisfaction in all aspects of accounting; little did we know how high in the ranks her expertise would take her. Louise is the leader of our Finance Team and thrives on checks and balances. Speaking of dirty hands, Louise is an avid gardener and supplies the office with fresh vegetables for team cookouts and family meals all summer long. Megan Rodewald With a love for solving any problem she can find and a knack for working in teams, Megan has always had the makings of an engineer. This can-do attitude likely stemmed from her determination in Irish dance, which Megan began at age 7. When in the front office, Mia serves as your first point of contact to clients, as well as accounting support. Mia is a plant lover, and has a slowly expanding indoor garden in her room. It currently features over 20 different species of succulents! When Michael was in Norway for three months, he took a few weekends and toured the country, even traveling to Svalbard to drive dogsleds and spelunk in ice caves! He looks at life from a big-picture perspective with a healthy dose of humility. This allows him to act as a bridge, often finding a common resolution that leaves everyone feeling the glow. If looking for Michael after business hours, try Our Lady of Perpetual Help parish or the seeking adventure on his motorcycle and the open road. Although these may seem like diverse interests, the diversity brings new ways of encountering challenges in creative ways. Monica Tournoux Monica, our resident cheer champion, is as passionate about the entire design process as she is about helping people solve real-life problems. Her years-long compulsion to draw what she sees around her began when she was 8 years old and is evident in the stacks of sketchbooks stashed at the office, in her bedroom, in her car When not sketching another cutting-edge solution Monica takes to her longboard to explore her city. Oscar Garcia With several successful projects already under his belt by the time he joined our team, Oscar was raring to go, and jumped in headfirst. A multi-sport athlete and artist of several mediums in his spare time, he applies similar philosophies to both his home and work lives: Although he does have his favorite parts of the job, such as sketching and 3-D modeling, Oscar strives to be well rounded. Like many of us, Oscar loves to travel – but only he has set the goal to visit every country once in his lifetime! Pete Koloski Both in his personal life and here at the office, Pete is all about family. He wholeheartedly believes that working collaboratively produces the best results and is a whole lot more fun than going it alone. In this industry where products are created for all sorts of demographics, Pete recognizes the genius in pulling together a diverse team whose members bring their unique life experiences into the mix. At his college orientation, Pete ended up in the wrong room. Talk about a happy accident. Rainer Teufel Rainer is a man who lives life to the fullest. Why visit a new city if not to explore its nooks and crannies? Why have scenic landscaping if not to get your hands dirty and plant trees. Rainer reaches out and grabs authentic experiences every day. Find one thing uncool about that! Rainer does like to collect things. If it is not rocks, he collects masks from all over the world. Aside from his love for art, he feels they give a unique snapshot into people and their culture. Romina Barrera You might take a cup of coffee in the morning, Romina takes a cup of laughter, or two, or three. She grew up living around the world, making her way through Mexico and different parts of Europe. This shaped an exciting childhood, which turned her natural curiosity into a passion for discovery and exploration. For Romina, design is an interdisciplinary learning process of mixing and matching odd pieces of knowledge to achieve anything and everything – to do what? Prototyping by day, sculpting by night – Romina loves working with her hands, especially if it involves clay and glazes. Sharon Shai Sharon is cut from marketing cloth! As one of seven siblings, she is naturally gregarious and plays well with just about anyone, and finds it easy to focus in on getting a particular result. She honed these gifts while working her way up to director of a national skincare brand and shows no signs of slowing, always looking for new ways to be effective. Growing up a bookworm on a working farm, Sharon learned early on the importance of budgeting time, a skill that has served her well. Her experience in managing large teams over multiple locations prepared her for the deadline-based, creative environment she found at Design Central. Sharon is a lover of live music. She has traveled over miles to see her favorite band perform, and even met her husband at a music festival! Slade Simpson Slade is a resourceful dude.

When you know how to write, and you use that power to write and promote a book, you can change your life. Writing and promoting a book opens windows of opportunity—opportunities that would never otherwise show up. Your book becomes your business card, proving your expertise and professionalism. You can leverage your book into whatever you want your life to be. Many find writing a book to be a frustrating and unrewarding experience. Fail to receive rewards The following are the 11 biggest reasons many first-time authors fail to receive the rewards they expect: The vast majority of books fail to earn out their advance. Instead, right from the start, develop a personal marketing plan to leverage off your book. Instead of trying to make money on the book itself, use your book to open doors, promote your credibility, and build relationships with readers. Writing without a contract Never write a book without a signed contract. Instead, prepare a detailed book proposal and two sample chapters. Publishers are increasingly selective the titles they accept. Often, less than 1 in 50 titles proposed are published. Worse, most books change during the writing and editing process. No agent It is essential that you be represented by a literary agent. Publishers rarely accept unsolicited book proposals. Unsolicited proposals are frequently returned unread or are simply discarded. The right agent will know exactly which publishers might be interested in your book. You must have an agent who knows what to look for and is able to negotiate more terms. Weak titles Titles sell books. The title of your book is like the headline of an advertisement. Successful titles stress the benefits readers will gain from your book. Successful titles arouse curiosity and offer solutions. Publishers want concepts that can be expanded into a series rather than individual titles. Going it alone Successful careers involve a nurturing support group of readers and peers. Your quest should include the support of your friends, other authors, book coaches, readers and others who will help you maintain your enthusiasm while providing ideas, assistance, and feedback. Hiring a developmental editor while preparing your initial book proposal helps you avoid the myopia of focusing too closely on the trees, rather than the viewing your book in the context of your career as well as existing books on the topic. Review your progress just before bed. This reduces stress and continuously reengages your subconscious mind. Self-editing Avoid unnecessary self-editing. Nothing can happen until you finish the first draft! Failure to promote Publishers are not promoters. Publishers are skilled at editing, manufacturing, and distributing books. But, they are not set up to give your book the marketing attention it deserves. If you want your book to succeed, you have to promote it as well as write it. Failure to backup and save Save your work frequently when writing. Always save before printing. Never turn off your computer without making a copy of your files for off-premises storage, or sending a copy of your work to yourself via e-mail. Consider printing your manuscript on 3-hole punched paper, which you insert in a 3-ring binder. Failure to plan future profits Before writing your book, create a book marketing plan. View book sales as the first step in an ongoing relationship with your market. Focusing on future profits as early as possible. Conclusion A book can, indeed, change your life. But, you must take charge take a proactive role in promoting and leveraging its success. I had relocated 3, miles away from home, with a new wife, baby, mortgage, and 2 new Saabs when I lost my job. The ability to write and promote a book is the ability to control your destiny. Roger has a 20 year record of helping others successfully master and apply the latest technology to marketing challenges.
