Chapter 4 : IELTS Academic Reading Practice Tests | IELTS Essentials

There is so much that you can learn from past IELTS exam papers. Here you can find Free IELTS Writing and Speaking Topics of the past IELTS Exams.

Sure you need to use reading skills like skimming and scanning but, lots of people have done really well on the IELTS test without practicing these skills. What separates students who get band 9 and everyone else is one thing. You not only have to know lots of vocabulary but you have to know lots of synonyms words that have the same or very similar meanings. This question looks simple enough. All we have to do is use our reading skills to locate the information in the paragraphs, right? In the same paper there were several more examples of synonyms and paraphrasing: Why are there so many synonyms? They then take that writing and make questions. If they simply copied the words and phrases it would be too easy, so they use synonyms to paraphrase. The result is lots of questions that have the same meaning as parts of the text but written in a different way. When you understand this and start to look for these synonyms the IELTS reading test becomes much easier. Should I practice lots of tests and find all the synonyms? It is always a good idea to practice for the IELTS reading test, however, there are just far too many synonyms in the English language and it is extremely unlikely that the same ones will come up again. So how do I improve my vocabulary? Students ask me this all the time and I always tell them that reading is the single most effective way to improve your vocabulary. However, there are two very important things you should keep in mind. As I said above, it is important to practice these, but not all the time. It is much better if you read about something you are interested in. If you do this, you are more likely to learn something and not get bored. If you love football, read a football magazine. If you love clothes, read a fashion blog. Interested in world affairs? Read the international news. Secondly, you must record and review new words. When you see a new word, underline it. At the end, you can go back and try to guess the meaning. You can then confirm the meaning in a dictionary or online. You must then write these words down in a special notebook. Beside each word write the meaning, synonyms, and example sentences. Here is an example; By keeping a book you can then go back and review new words every week or so. If you do this every day you will have increased your vocabulary significantly. Below are some websites with interesting articles depending on your interests:

Chapter 5 : where can i get ielts past papers? | Yahoo Answers ielts exam past papers Every IELTS candidate wishes to know if he/she can have access to IELTS EXAM PAST PAPERS which IELTS examination body does not issue. One of the reason for not issuing past papers, it is not knowledge base test.

It consists of 40 questions. A variety of question types is used in order to test a wide range of reading skills. It requires you to read extracts from books, magazines, newspapers, notices, advertisements, company handbooks and guidelines. These are materials you are likely to encounter on a daily basis in an English speaking environment. The IELTS Academic Reading test includes three long texts which range from the descriptive and factual to the discursive and analytical. The texts are authentic and are taken from books, journals, magazines and newspapers. These have been selected for a non-specialist audience but are recognisably appropriate for anyone entering undergraduate or postgraduate courses or seeking professional registration. The IELTS Listening test will take about 30 minutes, and you will have an extra 10 minutes to transfer your answers to the answer sheet. You will listen to four recorded texts, monologues and conversations by a range of native speakers, and write their answers to a series of questions. These include questions which test the ability to understand main ideas and detailed factual information, ability to understand the opinions and attitudes of speakers, ability to understand the purpose of what is said and ability to follow the development of ideas. A variety of voices and native-speaker accents are used and you will hear each section only once. A conversation between two people set in an everyday social context, e. A monologue set in an everyday social context, e. A conversation between up to four people set in an educational or training context, e. A monologue on an academic subject, e. Topics are of general interest to, and suitable for anyone entering undergraduate or postgraduate studies or seeking professional registration. You will be presented with a graph, table, chart or diagram and you will be asked to describe, summarise or explain the information in your own words. You may be asked to describe and explain data, describe the stages of a process, how something works or describe an object or event. You will be asked to write an essay in response to a point of view, argument or problem. The Speaking test is designed to assess your use of spoken English. Every test is recorded. The Speaking test consists of three parts: You will be asked to answer general questions about yourself and a range of familiar topics, such as your home, family, work, studies and interests. This part lasts between 4 and 5 minutes. You will be given a card and you will be asked to talk about a particular topic. You will have one minute to prepare before speaking for up to two minutes. The examiner then asks you one or two questions on the same topic to finish this part of the test. You will be asked further questions connected to the topic in Part 2. These questions give you an opportunity to discuss more abstract issues and ideas. This part lasts between four and five minutes.
