Chapter 1 : Find NASCAR Diecast Values & Prices in the RCCA Catalog

-- Full-color photos and values of the Wonder Boy's die-cast collectibles-- Secondary market values for his trading cards-- Career highlights and a detailed biography-- Features on other Jeff Gordon collectibles.

The first series of knives were etched on the back side of the blade in a grayish color. I consider these 25 knives priceless. Almost nine years passed before another knife series was even considered. What did a knife have to do with a race car anyway? I asked that same question when the airplane banks came out. Watch the planes, later they will be priceless. In , three men in Dawsonville, Ga joined together to do a small series regarding their hero, Bill Elliott. Without a clue on how this series would sell, they used all of the money they could muster up. They knew the knife series had to be paid for, but would it sell? Bill Elliott was a very popular driver in the Dawsonville area. Even today, being popular is very important if you want to sell a series. They used a simple wooden box, no computer engraving, just printing in black on the top of the box: They used a plastic inlay covered with a brown synthetic felt. In the middle was a Case burnt jig bone trapper knife, resting in a pre-molded pattern with both knife blades open. The etchings on the blades were, for the first time, in color. This series had no authenticity sheet. I have been told the whole knife series sold out in just two days. Today, the series is worth whatever you can convince some one to sell it for. At the same time, a Frost series was done to honor Bill Elliott, using lockback knives, in a separate gift box. It is called the "Million Dollar Bill" set. A celebration of the date bill won his first million. There has been a lot of racing knives series done since the first Elliott. The Petty collection has more dedicated collectors than any other set listed in the price guide. Good records were kept by the author and when the Blue Bone knife was released, the red bone knife collectors were notified. Many collectors agreed to purchase their number and the knife was matched to as many as possible. Again, only of the Petty red bone knives were made. The demand was so great that blue bone Petty knives were made and sold. It is obvious that all of the blue bone knife owners have matching numbers. The "Legend" set is one of my favorites. When all of the Legend sets were completed, there was 32 big Coke knives left over. What do you do with 32 extra etched knives? They simply added crossed racing flags to the bolster, changed the box completely and added a new authenticity sheet. I took two of the 32 knives with me when I went to Level Cross to see Richard. We discussed the set and while he was talking, he signed the authenticity sheet the only place on a knife set a driver should sign his autograph. The final knife in the "Petty" series was the "Tribute to a Legend". They made of this series and added the famous Petty silver coin. All of the Petty series, minus the King, used velvet material for the knife resting place in the box. The Tribute knife was also etched on the bolster and no paint was applied to the etched blade. The handles were made of imitation Ivory real ivory is illegal , placed on a Case big coke knife pattern. The handles were a scrimshawed-artist hand painted picture of the 43 crossing the final finish line. All of this was placed in a walnut gift box with a tour inlay secured to the top of the lid. Of all of the driver knife series, I consider the Petty, red bone, blue bone, Legend, The King, and the Tribute collection the best. To have all of the Petty series with matching numbers is awesome. Several knife series are still not finished. The idea is to make several hundred, sell that part out and make more as orders continue to come in. If the series stops selling, then you are safe and will not loose a lot of money. They would simply go to another project. When Davey was killed in the copter accident, his rookie knife had stopped at out of total. That left out of the series yet to be completed. Did they finish the Davey Rookie series? You Better believe they did. After the death of Neil Bonnett, research showed that the "Alabama Gang" knife series, commissioned in , had only sold out of the authorized. Again, that series was quickly finished and sold out almost immediately. A special note regarding the accident of Ernie Irvan. The first were completed using the 4 car number on the box and blades. A decision was made to complete the second part of the series, but using a different Case trapper pattern. A Case brown jig trapper SSP knife was used. The box was changed and any reference to the 4 car or just the 4 was dropped from the knife, box and authenticity sheet. This is really two completely different series. They match only in title and therefore are totally different. The appraisal guide will show two different series. The first knives, using the 4 car, were serial numbered under The second brown jig pattern knife of the "Natural Born Driver" series was serial number up to If you can see both of these knives together, you would have to agree that it is a totally different set. That happened with the "Handsome Harry", made set. One set turned into two sets because they ran out of the first knife pattern and finished off with a burnt jig bone knife. Unlike the Irvan series, there was two different authenticities with two different totals. Anyway, back to Ernie. A true collector will want both sets of the "Natural Born Driver", with the first being much more valuable. In late , a contract was signed that would dwarf any knife contract in racing today. The "20th Anniversary Mint Set", a coalition of 21 knives, was placed in a solid Cherry cabinet with a pull out drawer. Several of the knife patterns was a "first time" for Case knife. To my knowledge that was the only time a double blade Coke knife has ever been used. To collect the series, you had to buy two knives per month. The series sold near or about sets out of the contracted. In , some of the knives that were already itched, but not placed in the cherry wood cabinet, as sets, were sold as single knives. Give the completed series some time, and it will go up even higher than the appraised value. As for the single knives from the 20th Anniversary set, they will be a racing knife without a box, of no value, except to the owner and I hope they were not serial numbered. If you have the full set, keep it. It is a good investment. The price guide will not show the single knives. Climate control around this set is a must. The 20th Anniversary Mint set was accompanied by a private made Case big coke series, "20th Anniversary" knife, each serial numbered and placed in a walnut box with no authenticity sheet. These were never intended for retail purpose. They were meant just for gifts to special friends of Winston Motor Sports. I have seen this series and to see one is something else, to own one is awesome. Several knife collections were completed as special gifts. Robert never intended to sell any of the knives. Only 59 were done regarding the 59 Alliance car. Robert gave his team members each a knife, then four sets of the knives were given to each of the four Alliance schools. Although I wanted to, I never opened the factory-sealed box. Here is another limited series to watch out for. I considered this one to be worth a lot of money. This one is very hard to find. Limited to say the least, these knives are a series of rookie and championship knives limited to only made of each one. This knife series drew little attention when they were first released. Today, they have taken the center stage as far as I am concern. All of the authenticity sheets were signed. I consider the knives to be their "Rookie Knife".

Moreover such events produced a world of collectibles. Generally speaking it extends from infant clothing and collector plates to crew shirts and throw blankets. A collector can also find a wrist watch paying tribute to a favorite driver, or a similarly focused neon sign. There are also decals, pins, and patches. Much of the so-called older NASCAR material is paper-related including pocket schedules, types of posters, calendars, annual guides, and tickets. The treasures may include postcard featuring the legendary Fonty Flock or a program depicting the remarkable Lee Petty. One such example was recently sold at a leading auction house in New York City. Two Maxx race trading cards Later on marketing experts expanded that world to include most everything from breakfast cereal to soft drinks. As early as the s Racing Pictorial Magazine began producing their own specialized postcards of notable drivers. Such shirts were distinctive with red and white stripes and blue background reminiscent of the American flag. A single name was embroidered in white thread on the front, along with an STP patch on the pocket. It has been reported that STP had to borrow such a crew shirt years later in an effort to re-create similar items for their 25th anniversary. Dale Earnhardt worn race helmet used during his final season. Wallace was the Winston Cup Rookie of the Year and later in the s a champion of champions. Manufacturers extending from giants like Coca Cola and Pepsi to regional bottlers like Sun Drop were offering a cool soft drink to the crowds at racing events. Presently a leading racing collectibles guide cites a green colored six-bottle series from Sun Drop which honors the late Dale Earnhardt as "the most coveted series of drink bottles" in the field of NASCAR collectibles. Breakfast cereal boxes were even bigger during that grand decade. Although they are collected in folded form or virtually unopened, condition is always very important. Milk and sugar stains are not acceptable. Elsewhere Toy Biz, for example, provided action figures of Bill Elliott, Dale Jarrett, Mark Martin and others in different sizes from 5 inches to 12 inches tall. Items directly connected with the late Dale Earnhardt; including helmets, signed-programs, Goodyear Eagle racing tires, and even an Earnhardt signed baseball have all brought considerable premiums at shows, shops, and auctions. Included are bean bag racers, cards, cereal boxes, clocks, comic books, decanters, figures, knives, porcelain cars, statues, steins, ornaments, medallions, and much more.
