What is the favor of God, and how can I get it? We delight in him. We usually favor people who also favor us. In the same way, God shows favor to the ones who delight in, connect with, and give honor to Him. Favor is closely related to grace in the Bible. Those who have received Jesus as their Savior are saved by grace through faith Ephesians 2: They know the favor of God. Without faith, it is impossible to please God Hebrews This does not mean that everyone who is prosperous or healthy has found favor with God Jeremiah Nor does it mean that those whom the Lord favors will never suffer difficulties. Heroes such as Noah Genesis 6: Those who are favored of God know that God is with them and that nothing can happen to them apart from His good purpose Romans 8: They have His ear as they walk through dark valleys Psalm When we have the favor of the Lord, we rest in quiet confidence that our sins are forgiven Romans 4: We walk with God as with our closest friend. We begin to see and appreciate the little blessings that God provides for our enjoymentâ€”blessings that we once took for granted. The Lord invites us to seek His favor Psalm When we seek His favor, we humble our hearts before Him 2 Kings We seek first His kingdom and righteousness Matthew 6: One way to obtain favor from the Lord is to seek wisdom. His delight in us will be demonstrated.

Chapter 4 : Delight LED Lights | Vision & Mission

I never met a caprese salad I didn't like. With tomato season in full swing and backyard full of basil, it's a kitchen staple right now. Alas, what if you can have too much of a good thing (or maybe you simply run out of garden tomatoes)? That's where this recipe comes in. Peaches. Who would.

Also waiting at the intersection was a man in his car, anxious to make a right hand turn. He was impatient because the car ahead of him would not turn on a red light. He did not see the pedestrian in the crosswalk for whom the man in front was waiting. Furiously he honked his horn and raced his motor. When the car ahead of him finally cleared the intersection the angry motorist behind him took off with his tires squealing. He quickly passed the motorist who had caused his delay, glaring and shaking his fist at him. His satisfaction at having vented his frustration was momentary, however. Not only had this hostile fellow failed to observe the pedestrian in the crosswalk, he had also overlooked the patrol car at the other side of the intersection. To the smell of smoking tires was added the sound of a siren and the sight of flashing lights. As I watched this little scene I felt a tremendous sense of elation as the policeman proceeded to give him a citation. Generally speaking whenever we feel good at such times we also feel guilty. Should the saint be happy when the sinner gets his due? Psalm 92 forces us to consider this matter because it is a psalm of worship. In this passage God is being praised by the psalmist for destroying the wicked and exalting the righteous above his enemies. How is it possible that a godly person can rejoice at the destruction of the wicked? What makes us feel guilty about the punishment of evildoers when the psalmist feels glad? This is the problem which our passage poses, and the purpose of our study will be to attempt to find a satisfactory solution. The lesson which this psalm teaches should have profound implications in our lives. Let us consider this text prayerfully, asking God to give us insight and understanding. The Worthiness of Worship NASB The superscription of Psalm 92 does not identify the author, but it does provide a very interesting comment about the use of the psalm. This suggests that our psalm focuses on the area of worship. The first three verses confirm this by emphasizing the worthiness of worship. Let us consider, first of all, the blessedness of worship. The psalmist means for us to understand that worship is good in that it is pure pleasure to those who truly love God. This aspect of worship is more fully developed in Psalm 95, another lesson in this series. Worship brings about positive results in our lives. It is appropriate, it is morally good, it is proper to respond to God with praise. Jesus told the woman at the well that God is seeking those who will worship Him in spirit and in truth John 4: Worship is perhaps the most worthy of all activities for it brings pleasure to God as well as pleasure to us. The appropriateness of worship is one of the principal themes of our psalm. Worship is a many splendored thing. It is a delight and a duty. This is summed up in another psalm: We also learn from verses some of the manifestations of worship. Not only does worship have numerous benefits, it also takes a variety of forms. There are several expressions that are used in these verses to describe the various acts of worship which are encouraged. We have already discussed the concept of thanks in a previous lesson. We are acknowledging God for who He is, for His actions. Verse three further pursues the subject of musical praise. Singing praises is surely one form of worship, but in the third verse we are taught that singing with musical accompaniment may be more inspiring. The psalmist who was surely a musician reminds us that our singing is often enhanced when it is accompanied by musical instruments. Frankly I puzzle at those who conclude that worship in the New Testament involves unaccompanied singing. Whenever accompaniment enhances our singing, it enriches our worship. Music is a significant part of our worship experience because it is one means by which we may express our gratitude and adoration toward God. It is impossible for any definition to encompass the broad sense of this word. Why did you conceal the truth from me? We can make something public that has been private. He published what should have remained secret. They went in to cover up the sin that he had made public. God is exalted by our public praise. Let me attempt to illustrate this. It is fitting for a husband to tell his wife privately that he loves her. I know many wives would like to hear this more often. Yet it is more noteworthy when a husband praises his wife before others, as the husband of the ideal wife is said to do: Worship provides us with the opportunity to say publicly of God what we should be saying privately to Him. There are various manifestations of worship. I do not understand the psalmist to imply that praising, psalming and proclaiming are the only forms of worship. In the context of the Sabbath day worship, praising, psalming and proclaiming are all a duty and a delight to the one who trusts in God. The Motivation and Basis for Worship Thy thoughts are very deep. NASB In the first line of verse 4 the psalmist tells us his motivation: Worship is not a drudgery, it is a delight. It is something that we should look forward to doing. When I was younger I used to look at worship differently. I went to our church services thinking in terms of the minutes then it seemed like hours that I had to endure. I now see that I lacked the joy which the psalmist displays here. Verse four also introduces the subject of the basis for worship: Many people, when they come to worship, do it in some kind of ecstasy that is not rooted in history. It is merely existential and emotional activity in which one works up a kind of giddiness that hardly relates to reality. Often this kind of ecstasy denies reality. The worship of which the psalmist speaks is historical worship. He is worshipping God for who He is and for what He does: Specifically, the work of God has to do with the punishment of the wicked and the exaltation and reward of the righteous. Verse 5 introduces the major section of the psalm: This is also true in Romans How unsearchable are His judgments and unfathomable are His ways! In a like manner, the psalmist is meditating on the works of God and the purposes of God. He continues in verses 6 and 7: In the NASB you will see a colon at the end of verse 6. Kidner differs with this interpretation. Therefore verses 5 and 6 may very well be saying: A senseless man has no knowledge; nor does a stupid man understand this. He does not fathom the working of God in His purposes. Animals differ from men in that men have the ability to reason and to revere God. The man who will not praise God for His works and His worth is really no better than the cow out in the field. Interestingly enough, those who are senseless and brutish are inclined to accuse Christians of being irrational. What is the intellectual sophistication of our age saying, if not that Christians are those who have taken off their heads? The psalmist says these fools are guilty of their own charges. The failure of the brutish to understand God and to worship Him for His works leads them to err in regard to their own destiny. They are totally unaware of the judgment which awaits them: This verse contains a contrast between the apparent prosperity of the wicked and the certainty of their demise. The sudden prosperity and growth of the wicked is like that of the weeds which appear every spring. They sprout rapidlyâ€”long before the grass and the flowers, but they are gone just as quickly. Viewed from the short-term perspective the wicked seem to have it made, but from an eternal viewpoint, they have had it. The wicked man perceives that his prosperity is the consequence of his sin. The pinnacle of the psalm is found in verse 8: While the other verses each have two lines, this verse has only one. It falls exactly in the middle of the psalm.
