This is the best book search engine on the net, from a huge Canadian company originally started by booksellers. Millions of books of all kinds from dealers all over the world, some not found in libraries. Most of the English language books ever published: You should limit your search at least to Format: You can do this on the advanced search page or once you arrive at the results, using the left hand column, as with AbeBooks. Often you can find more about the content of a title by going to an individual library holding. Once you have narrowed down a possible title, try Amazon. The colour option on Google is working better and better. I have started using Images on Bing. Look in the left hand column to limit your search to these. A few words can help: If all you can remember is a few words, try Google. Put the words in quotes. Use only one or two, essential, easily-spelled, keywords. Try this sample Google search: Selling One or Two Books. Probably the easiest place for an individual to sell books like those above is on Amazon. Look up your book, click on the picture, then look in the blue box for "Have one to sell? If, and only if, Amazon has listed the book in the past, will you be able to list also. Ebay is also very easy and inexpensive to use for a few books and it allows you more room to describe the books. For pricing your book, it is easier and more accurate to use the AbeBooks. Then double check on Amazon because prices there are sometimes higher. The more care you put into describing your books, the more likely you are to sell them. We do not purchase books online, sight unseen. Please do not offer them to us. In 1954, when she was six years old, her parents responded to a request from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People NAACP and volunteered her to participate in the integration of the New Orleans school system, even though her father was hesitant. Though the Brown v. Board of Education decision was finalized in 1954, southern states were extremely resistant to the decision that they must integrate for the six following years. In 1957, federal troops stationed in Little Rock, Arkansas were ordered to combat violence that occurred as a result of the decision. Integration In early 1957, Ruby Bridges was one of six black children in New Orleans to pass the test that determined whether they could go to the all-white school, William Frantz Elementary. Two of the six decided to stay at their old school, Bridges went to a school by herself, and three children were transferred to McDonogh No. 19. Bridges and her mother were escorted to school by four federal marshals during the first day that Bridges attended William Frantz Elementary. Her mother finally convinced her father to let her go to the school. There was a large crowd of people outside of the school. They were throwing things and shouting, and that sort of goes on in New Orleans at Mardi Gras. Marshals escorted Bridges to and from school. As soon as Bridges entered the school, white parents pulled their own children out; all the teachers except for one refused to teach while a black child was enrolled. Only one person agreed to teach Ruby and that was Barbara Henry, from Boston, Massachusetts, and for over a year Henry taught her alone, "as if she were teaching a whole class. On the second day, however, a white student broke the boycott and entered the school when a year-old Methodist minister, Lloyd Anderson Foreman, walked his 5-year-old daughter Pam through the angry mob, saying, "I simply want the privilege of taking my child to school Every morning, as Bridges walked to school, one woman would threaten to poison her, while another held up a black baby doll in a coffin; [14] because of this, the U. Marshals dispatched by President Eisenhower, who were overseeing her safety, allowed Ruby to eat only the food that she brought from home. She has noted that many others in the community, both black and white, showed support in a variety of ways. Describing the mission of the group, she says, "racism is a grown-up disease and we must stop using our children to spread it. Henry; and Kevin Pollak as Dr. Hurricane Katrina also significantly damaged William Frantz Elementary School, and Ruby played a significant role in fighting for the school to remain open. Your brain on marijuana Eleven-year-old Ashley Surin was not allowed to attend class because she wears a medical marijuana patch and uses cannabis oil and lotion to manage seizures. The medical marijuana and a special diet have worked wonders for her health, according to her parents. Her brain used to be like in a cloud. Now she can think better and is more alert and she can interact. Her doctors gave the little girl several rounds of chemotherapy and spinal injections to fight the cancer. The treatment sent her cancer into remission, but one of the spinal injections triggered seizures. Her father said her health deteriorated and Ashley was not herself. The medicine left her with extreme mood swings, memory loss and limited energy -- and she still had seizures. Read More One full body seizure at a grocery store last year sent her to the hospital. She hit her head on the cement floor with such force doctors had to drain the blood from her brain. When doctors wanted to try a fourth drug last August, Jim Surin said, "We drew a line in the sand. The Surins got their medical marijuana license in December. Ashley gets what looks like a small bandage on her foot twice a day. They rub lotion on her wrist from a tube that looks like lip balm, her dad said. If she does have a seizure, she gets a small drop of oil on her tongue. Unlike with a diabetic child who needs help from an adult at school to administer insulin, a nurse or teacher could lose his or her license if they helped Ashley with her prescription. And if Ashley wore her patch to school, she or her parents could technically face criminal prosecution. Marijuana of any kind, including medical, is not allowed on school grounds, school buses or at school-related events. While sympathetic, and a criminal prosecution would be unlikely, the district said it felt it had to follow the law the way it was written. In the mean time, she had to stay out of school, missing a couple of weeks of class. Sessions nixes Obama-era rules leaving states alone that legalize pot The parents sued Schaumburg School District 54 early this year. The morning before the hearing, Kriha said she got a call from the district superintendent and the school board president who told her the mission was to do whatever she could to make sure Ashley could come back to school. Kriha said she applauded the Surins "courage" for bringing the lawsuit against the district. The Illinois attorney general agreed not to prosecute and said there should be no negative legal ramifications for staff who help Ashley with the medicine. The federal judge issued an emergency order to allow Ashley to go back to school. It does not yet provide legal cover for other children in Illinois in her circumstances. A hearing is scheduled for Wednesday to determine where the case will go in the future. Colorado, Maine, New Jersey and Washington state allow students to use medical marijuana at school. And on Tuesday last week, Ashley did return to school. Her father said it felt a little "surreal. They were amazing and super supportive," Surin said. The ruling and the warm reception have left the Surin family even more determined to create change.

Everything you love about a smooth and creamy homemade pumpkin pie, in a bite sized portion. Pumpkin Pie Bites Who loves pumpkin pie? Nothing beats a slice of homemade pie! These bite-size Mini Pumpkin Pies would be perfect for parties or special occasions, because you can make so many of them, and they look really impressive. With these pumpkin pie bites, you get all the same flavors of a homemade pumpkin pie, with less prep time, less bake time, and a higher crust-to-filling-ratio. I know from experience! How to make Mini Pumpkin Pies in a muffin tin: Start by preheating the oven and spraying the two mini muffin tins with cooking spray. Make sure to spray your pan well so that the pies pop right out. Press cut outs into the wells of the muffin tins and place in the fridge to chill. Remove the tins from the refrigerator and fill each crust with 1. Tap the tins on the counter to create a smooth, even filling. Let the pies cool in the tins for 15 minutes, then transfer to a wire rack to cool completely. You can serve them at room temperature, or refrigerate them and serve them chilled. Can these mini pumpkin pies be made ahead of time? Yes, indeed – just be sure to store them in the fridge for hours in advance. Add whipped cream closer to when serving. How many does this recipe make? Again – we love pumpkin pie but especially love that these cute little pies can be made in 15 minutes. For more pumpkin recipes, check out:
