Chapter 1 : Olympic basketball's muddy beginnings - Olympic News

A history of basketball covers its greatest moments in Olympic history, including the rivalry between the United States and the Soviet Union From The Community.

Some of the greatest sports stories ever told come courtesy of the Olympic Games. From the Miracle on Ice to the Jamaican bobsled team, the Olympics have a knack for bringing out the best in people. When it comes to Olympic teams, it really boils down to one of two things. The first is complete and total dominance. Being head and shoulders above the competition puts any team in the running for the GOAT. The second thing is underdog status. A team that scraps its way to the top, despite the fact that no one thinks they can do it, is also in the running. Most importantly, to be considered one of the greatest of all time, an Olympic team must win Gold. In , the U. During the campaign, they won Olympic gold in Los Angeles, knocking off Brazil in decisive fashion. By the time the Olympics rolled around, the Soviets were back in the games and ready to pick up where they left off. After all, they had dominated the sport alongside Japan throughout the s and s. Unfortunately for them, they met a determined United States team in the finals. The Soviets claimed the first set but the Americans bounced back in dramatic fashion, winning gold in just four sets. The lead-up to the games was already full of drama, as it was set to be the last hoorah for the fabled Fab Five. Soon, Abbie Wambach and the rest of the new guard would be tasked with taking over the legendary squad. After dominating the group stage, the U. In a fitting end to the games, Wambach scored the gold medal winning goal in the th minute of the finals against Brazil. The Fab Five went out on top and Wambach became the face of the new generation. Their hockey team, in particular, was considered nearly unbeatable. That is until a pesky team of American scrappers took them down in one of the greatest stories in sports history. The Soviet hockey team skated to an easy win during the Olympics in Sapporo and followed that up with a series of exhibition games against North American professionals. They carried their momentum to the Olympics in Innsbruck and won gold in one of the most decisive performances to date, outscoring their opponents by a total of . Going into the games, the Soviets were once again heavy favorites. Unfortunately for them, a scrappy U. Even with their Lake Placid loss, the Soviet team of the s is still one of the most dominant ever. That team played with more heart and conviction than any other. Between their underdog status, their raw skill, and the fact that they beat an unbeatable team, they easily earned their spot on this list. The team pulled off a similar, albeit much less publicized, underdog story. The Soviets were considered by many to be utterly unbeatable. They were overwhelming favorites to win it all for a third straight games, but the author of this tale was American. In one of the most dramatic performances of all-time, the U. It seems like more often than not, the Americans beat themselves in the Olympics or in the case of , the refs beat them. That being said, two U. One of those teams is the Beijing squad. Led by Kobe Bryant and Dwyane Wade, the team dominated the competition. All of this came after a supremely disappointing bronze medal in the games. The American men have dominated the pool for what seems like decades. Despite several outstanding performances, the real standout from the Olympics was the U. That year, the U. There were two team events for the women that year, the 4Xm freestyle relay and the 4X medley relay. In total, the U. They were so good in fact, that many people suspected them of cheating in some way or another. The truth is, the Netherlands are really just obsessed with speed skating, especially long track speed skating. Throughout Olympic speed skating history, the Dutch have collected a staggering long track medals. At the Olympics, the Dutch team continued their dominance in overwhelming fashion. The squad took down 24 of 36 medals, including 21 of 30 individual medals, and broke the Olympic record for the most gold medals won by a single country in a single event. Collectively, the Dutch speed skating team at the games put on one of the most dominant displays in the history of the Olympics.

Within a few decades, the new game became popular throughout the United States as an indoor sport. American dominance[edit] Thanks in part to the effort of Phog Allen [3] [4] â€”a Kansas Jayhawks collegiate coachâ€”the first Olympic basketball tournament was organized in the Berlin Olympics on outdoor tennis courts. Naismith presented the medals to the top three teams. According to the Olympic rules of that time, all of the competitors were amateurs. The tournament was held indoors for the first time in . The American team proved its dominance, winning the first seven Olympic tournaments until , without losing a single game. While the Americans were barred from sending a team that contained players from the professional National Basketball Association , they instead sent in college players; teams from some other countries sent in their best players, as some of their players were classified as "amateur" by FIBA, by earning allowances instead of wages. Munich and after[edit] The U. After the game, the American team refused to accept the silver medal, and the medal has been kept in IOC possession ever since. The Americans regained the title in , by beating Spain in the final, with the Soviets boycotting this time. The Soviets won the gold medal for the second time in , after beating the U. The Soviet Union entered teams of athletes who were all nominally students, soldiers, or working in a profession, but all of whom were in reality paid by the state to play in a well-developed league with modern facilities and train year-round. In the Summer Olympics , the U. By this time, the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia no longer existed, but their successor states continued to be among the leading forces. Two newly independent countries of the former Yugoslavia and Soviet Union, Croatia and Lithuania , won the silver and bronze medals respectively. The American team repeated its victory in and , but its performance was not as dominant as in . Yugoslavia was the runner-up in Atlanta, and France in Sydney , with Lithuania winning bronze again on both occasions. The renewed dominance of the U. The Americans regrouped in , beating the reigning FIBA world champions , Spain , in an intense gold medal game, with the Argentines beating the Lithuanians in the bronze medal game. The Americans and the Spaniards met again in the gold medal game, with the U. The Soviet Union won five straight games, becoming the inaugural champion. The next two tournaments followed the six-team round-robin format, with the Soviets defending their title in amid the U. In , the tournament expanded into eight teams, with the Americans beating Yugoslavia in the gold medal game. In , the Unified Team , consisting of the former Soviet republics , defeated China in the gold medal game. In , the tournament settled into its current team format; the U.
