Before this the federal government had participated in the relief program through the Federal Emergency Relief Administration FERA , set up under an act of 12 May , and the Civil Works Administration, established by an executive order of 9 November , the two agencies having a common administrator. The administration of work relief, however, was taken over by the WPA when that agency was created in May The WPA was officially abolished on 30 June The WPA also created jobs for those with other talents such as writers, who were put to work completing surveys of historical records of the Commonwealth and collecting the life histories of Virginians, including ones who formerly had been slaves. Scope and Content The following is a preliminary inventory and finding aid. The collection is not fully processed but is available to patrons at the State Records Center. Records , of the Work Projects Administration of Virginia documenting its efforts to provide relief jobs for artists, musicians, actors, and white-collar and professional workers during the Great Depression. This collection contains various surveys and writing projects such as oral histories, abstracts and transcripts of court records, published books, radio plays, and state histories. Also of note are the Historical Records Survey, Virginia Historical Inventory, a collection of photographs, maps, and detailed reports documenting the architectural, cultural, and family histories of thousands of 18th- and 19th-century buildings in communities across Virginia. Arrangement This collection is arranged into the following series: Historical Records Survey II. Use Restrictions There are no restrictions.
