Senator Clarice Jah, Who is she? Sep 27, By: Firestone has the largest rubber plantation in Liberia. But according to Senator Jah, the work and living conditions on the camps owned and operated by the company yester years were appalling. She cited the lack of adequate medical facilities, child labor, deplorable housing, and unsafe drinking water, among others, as some of the outrageous conditions. Senator Jah, 42, is a mother of four. She is married to Rev. The Senator hails from Charlesville. She is a graduate of the A. The youthful Senator is Margi County first female lawmaker in recent history. She is also a former classroom teacher; and from , she worked for the Catholic Secretariat in Liberia as an educator. I took on the challenge and won the position. She vowed to remain an animated voice for the voiceless in Margibi and Liberia as a whole. I attend sessions regularly, participate in deliberations and make informed decisions before casting my vote on any bills submitted to that body. According to the report, the Liberian Senate during the year had 26 legislative sessions with opportunities for participation in plenary on national issues, but Senator Jah spoke only six times during those sessions. When quizzed about the LDI report, the Sr. I speak on issues when necessary. So, how possible will it be for me to speak only six times in the Senate out of 26 sessions? Reports of monies and gifts changing hands during confirmation hearings and the ratification of contractual agreements are common in the Liberian press. The Senator reported lawmakers are underpaid and sometimes their works are impeded by the lack of transportation for staff and logistics. However, if, a nominee offers to buy food or drinks for senators during confirmations, such offers are often accepted. So, in the Senate ethical principles, which frown on the giving and taking of gifts by public servants in western societies, are sometimes, compromised. Most of the times, I am involved with church activities. Sandy is an exiled Liberian Journalist. He is a regular contributor to The Liberian Journal.
