

Chapter 1 : 8 now charged in toppling of Durham, N.C. Confederate statue - CBS News

The Durham Road User Charge Zone aims to reduce traffic congestion and pollution, and improve air quality in the Durham peninsula. It is also aimed at encouraging 'out-of-hours' use of the area, creating safer and more attractive streets for everyone. The zone is located on Durham peninsula, the.

Events at the house[ edit ] The house at North Buchanan Boulevard demolished in July In March , Crystal Gail Mangum , [13] [14] a student at North Carolina Central University , [1] had been working part-time for about two months as a stripper. Although Mangum claimed that she had only recently taken up stripping, she had actually worked at strip clubs as early as When she was arrested that year for stealing a taxi and trying to run over a police officer, the incident report stated that she had been lap dancing at a strip club that evening. The party was intended as compensation for the team having to remain on campus and miss Spring Break. The players were consuming alcohol at the party. Before arriving at the party, Mangum, by her own admission, had consumed alcohol and Flexeril a prescription muscle relaxant. Roberts drove herself and arrived first, and Mangum was later dropped off by a man. The player then brandished a broomstick and suggested that she "use this [as a sex toy]". While the women were still in the bathroom, Reade Seligmann and Collin Finnerty left the house. The women eventually came out, and Mangum roamed around the yard half-dressed and shouting. She asserts she was then dragged into a bathroom and raped, beaten, and choked for a half hour. The team captain who had hired the strippers tried to convince the women to come back into the house and complete the performance. Both women came back into the house, but upon being approached by the player who had earlier held up the broomstick, again refused to perform and locked themselves in the bathroom. By this point, a number of the party guests had left, and the residents of the house, including David Evans, were asking the remaining guests to leave because they were concerned that the noise would cause neighbors to complain to police. When the strippers left the bathroom and the house for the second time, a resident locked the door so they and the guests who had left the house could not get back in. The party ended shortly thereafter and everyone, including the residents, left the house. Roberts stopped the car and attempted to push Mangum out. The guard walked to the car and asked Mangum to leave, but Mangum remained in the vehicle. Police then arrived, removed Mangum from the car and questioned her. During the admission process, she claimed that she had been raped prior to her arrival. Examination of her skin, arms, and legs revealed no swelling, no abnormalities, and three small cuts on her right knee and right heel. When asked, she specifically and repeatedly denied receiving any physical blows by hands. Further examination showed no tenderness in the back, chest, and neck. Mangum later claimed that she had performed using a vibrator for a couple in a hotel room shortly before the lacrosse team party. This activity, or a yeast infection , could have caused the swelling. Investigators did not note any other injuries in the rest of the report. To whom it may concern, tomorrow night, after tonights show, ive decided to have some strippers over to edens 2c. I plan on killing the bitches as soon as the[y] walk in and proceding [ sic ] to cut their skin off while cumming in my duke issue spandex. Administrators asserted the e-mail was an imitation of Patrick Bateman , the protagonist in the Bret Easton Ellis novel, American Psycho , which was read and lectured upon in more than one Duke class, as shown by the e-mail responses from other players. Police released the McFadyen e-mail but refused to release the following e-mail exchanges, leaving the impression that the McFadyen e-mail was actually intended as a serious threat. McFadyen thereafter received a thousand death threats in one week. He was invited back to Duke to continue his studies later that summer. The three team captains who lived at the house, including David Evans, voluntarily gave statements and DNA samples to police and offered to take lie detector tests. The police turned down the offer. Mark Gottlieb, the police supervisor, posted on a digital community bulletin board that they were investigating the rape of a young woman by three males at North Buchanan, where she had attended a party in the late evening of March 13, and asking anyone in the area who saw or heard anything unusual to contact Investigator Benjamin Himan. Mangum identified Reade Seligmann as someone who attended the party, but not as an attacker, and did not identify Evans at all despite seeing his photo twice. Within a few hours of receiving the briefing, Nifong made his first public statement on the case. During the week of March 27, Nifong by his own estimate gave fifty to seventy interviews and devoted more than forty hours to reporters. After that, he continued to make statements, although less frequently. The photos were shown to Mangum as a PowerPoint presentation, with each photo projected individually to Mangum, instead of displaying all the pictures arrayed together. For the first time, Mangum identified photos of Seligmann, Evans, and Finnerty as her attackers. She also identified at least one other photo as being a player who was present at the party; further investigation showed he had not been there. Just before turning himself in at the Durham County Detention Center, he made a public statement declaring his innocence and his expectation of being cleared of the charges within weeks. Additionally, after hearing Mangum claim she was sexually assaulted, she called her claims "a crock". Defense attorneys contended that the withheld information was exculpatory evidence. The kidnapping and sexual offense charges were still pending against all three players. The page document accused Nifong of violating four rules of professional conduct, listing more than examples of statements he made to the media. Cooper also announced that Mangum would not be prosecuted, stating that investigators and attorneys that had interviewed her thought "she may actually believe the many different stories that she has been telling. The sole black member of the team was exempt because Mangum had stated that her attackers were white. On April 10, , it was announced that DNA testing by the state crime lab had failed to connect any of the 46 tested team members to the alleged rape. DNA from multiple unidentified males was found inside Mangum and upon the rape kit items that had been tested, but none matched any of the lacrosse players. Meehan testified that after discussions with Nifong, he decided to withhold the names of the persons excluded by the DNA testing all 46 tested members of the lacrosse team to protect the privacy of players not implicated in the case, despite the fact that two players Reade Seligmann and Collin Finnerty had already been indicted for rape more than three weeks prior to the release date of the report. Rape victims often delay reporting by days or weeks, inadvertently destroying DNA evidence. However, in this case, Mangum had a rape-kit exam administered only hours after the end of the party, so the absence of DNA evidence was considered unlikely by legal experts. Finnerty was initially accepted into a diversion program for first offenders, allowing for the simple assault charge to be dismissed upon his completion of community service. At trial, the chief defense witness was not permitted to testify and police officers presented details which were not in their notes. Durham police said that Mangum kept changing her story and was not credible, reporting that she initially told them she was raped by 20 white men, later reducing the number to only three. Another police report states that Mangum initially claimed she was only groped, rather than raped, but changed her story before going to the hospital. On December 22, , Nifong dropped the rape charges after Mangum stated that she was penetrated from behind but that she did not know with what. In North Carolina, penetration with an object is considered sexual assault, not rape. For example, she changed details about when she was attacked, who attacked her, and how they attacked her: This new timing is before the well-documented alibi evidence for Reade Seligmann that places him away from the house. However, the defense revealed that this new timing would suggest Seligmann was on the phone with his girlfriend during the height of the attack. Additionally, she received an incoming call at . The new statement contradicts time-stamped photos that show her dancing between . It would also mean that they stayed at the party for nearly an hour after the supposed attack since Kim Roberts drove her away at . In her April statement, Mangum said they left immediately after the attack. Mangum changed the names of her attackers, claiming they had used multiple pseudonyms. The accuser also changed her description of Evans. Mangum claimed that Evans stood in front of her, making her perform oral sex on him. Previously, she stated that Seligmann did this. In the latest statement, she stated that Seligmann did not commit any sex act on her and that he had said that he could not participate because he was getting married. Although he has a girlfriend, there has never been anything to suggest he was engaged or getting married. In one account, she claimed she was suspended in mid-air and was being assaulted by all three of them in the bathroom. Cooper then said this event seemed very implausible because of the small size of the bathroom. According to a 60 Minutes investigation, Mangum gave at least a dozen different stories. However, a photo shows her being helped by another player, while electronic records and witnesses reported that Evans and Finnerty had already left. Upon seeing the photo, Mangum claimed that it must have been doctored or that Duke University paid someone off. Media reports have disclosed at least two photo lineups that occurred in March and April in which she was asked to recall who she saw at the party and in what capacity. In the March lineup, she did not choose Dave Evans at all. The second stripper who performed at the house, Kim Roberts, said that Mangum was not raped. She stated that Mangum was not obviously hurt. Attorney Joseph Cheshire said the tests indicated DNA from a single male source came from a vaginal swab taken from Mangum. Media outlets reported that this DNA was from her boyfriend. On August 18, , the dancer " then 18 years old " told a police officer in Creedmoor she had been raped by three men in June , according to a police document. The security guard did not make a big deal of it because he felt that no one took her seriously. She led police officers on a high-speed chase before she was apprehended, at which point her blood alcohol level was more than twice the legal limit. Mark Gottlieb, has unfairly targeted Duke students in the past. During the photo identifications, Mangum was told that she would be viewing Duke University lacrosse players who attended the party, and was asked if she remembered seeing them at the party and in what capacity. Defense attorneys claimed this was essentially a "multiple-choice test in which there were no wrong answers", [] while Duke law professor James Earl Coleman Jr. Another person whom the accuser had identified in April also provided police with evidence that he did not attend the party at all. Gary Wells " an Iowa State University professor and expert on police identification procedures " has asserted that memory does not improve with time. Arresting officers first asked if he had anything new to say about the lacrosse case. When he refused to alter his testimony, he was taken into custody. An arrest and conviction would have destroyed his chance for citizenship and could have led to his deportation. Mark Gottlieb, had unfairly targeted Duke students in the past, putting some of his investigational tactics into question. Gottlieb has made a disproportionate number of arrests of Duke students for misdemeanor violations, such as carrying an open container of alcohol. Normally, these violations earn offenders a pink ticket similar to a traffic ticket. From May to February , when Sgt.

Chapter 2 : Durham Road User Charge Zone (congestion charge) exemptions - Durham County Council

DURHAM, N.C."Let me be clear, no one is getting away with what happened." That was Durham County Sheriff Mike Andrews's warning on August 15, The day before, a protest had formed on.

Chapter 3 : Fees and Charges - Region of Durham

The Durham City congestion charge was the first congestion charge to be introduced in the UK in October Durham County Council introduced the toll for drivers using 1,year-old Saddler Street in the city centre which stands on the peninsula above the River Wear.

Chapter 4 : Duke lacrosse case - Wikipedia

The Durham Jail Charges Detainees Extra for Commissary Items, Then Uses That Money to Pay for Things Like Blankets and Sheets By Sarah Willets. click to enlarge. File photo by Jeremy M. Lange.

Chapter 5 : Charges Against Three Defend Durham Demonstrators Dropped - INDY Week

Durham Police said Damien Lamar Squire told the year-old girl that he would give her a ride to school Monday morning. Instead, he took her to a motel on Guess Road, investigators said.

Chapter 6 : Development Charges - Region of Durham

Whether the charge is a minor traffic violation or a serious felony, the accused person deserves to know he or she will receive thorough, aggressive legal representation. The Durham, North Carolina law firm of Thomas, Ferguson & Mullins, LLP has built its reputation aggressively fighting tough criminal defense cases to get the best results for.

Chapter 7 : Charges Dropped for Some Arrested at Durham Demonstration | LL

Current Water & Sewer Rates Please note that for customers outside city limits, rates and service charges are doubled. Volume and service charges for certain customers served by Durham County's Triangle Wastewater Treatment Plant may vary from this schedule.

Chapter 8 : Durham City congestion charge - Wikipedia

A man who turned himself in at the Durham County jail was charged Tuesday with fatally shooting another man outside the Circle K convenience store on N.C. Atom Divine Cameron, 20, is charged.

Chapter 9 : Durham, North Carolina: Seven arrested in toppling of Confederate statue - CNN

Durham police have charged three people with murder in the death of a man whose remains were found in a burning car in late July. The victim's body was burned beyond recognition.