Scotland[edit] John Knox “, a Scot who had spent time studying under Calvin in Geneva, returned to Scotland and urged his countrymen to reform the Church in line with Calvinist doctrines. After a period of religious convulsion and political conflict culminating in a victory for the Protestant party at the Siege of Leith the authority of the Catholic Church was abolished in favour of Reformation by the legislation of the Scottish Reformation Parliament in . The Church was eventually organised by Andrew Melville along Presbyterian lines to become the national Church of Scotland. What resulted was an armed insurrection, with many Scots signing the Solemn League and Covenant. The Covenanters would serve as the government of Scotland for nearly a decade, and would also send military support to the Parliamentarians during the English Civil War. Following the restoration of the monarchy in , Charles II , despite the initial support that he received from the Covenanters, reinstated an episcopal form of government on the church. Covenanters in a Glen. However, legislation by the United Kingdom parliament allowing patronage led to splits in the Church. In , a group of ministers seceded from the Church of Scotland to form the Associate Presbytery, another group seceded in to form the Relief Church and the Disruption of led to the formation of the Free Church of Scotland. Further splits took place, especially over theological issues, but most Presbyterians in Scotland were reunited by union of the established Church of Scotland and the United Free Church of Scotland. Within Scotland the term kirk is usually used to refer to a local Presbyterian church. Some of the values and ideals espoused in Scottish presbyterian denominations can be reflected in this reference in a book from Norman Drummond, chaplain to the Queen in Scotland. English Presbyterianism In England, Presbyterianism was established in secret in . Thomas Cartwright is thought to be the first Presbyterian in England. Between and , a series of ordinances of the Long Parliament established Presbyterianism as the polity of the Church of England. Presbyterian government was established in London and Lancashire and in a few other places in England, although Presbyterian hostility to the execution of Charles I and the establishment of the republican Commonwealth of England meant that Parliament never enforced the Presbyterian system in England. The re-establishment of the monarchy in brought the return of Episcopal church government in England and in Scotland for a short time ; but the Presbyterian church in England continued in Non-Conformity, outside of the established church. Thomas Bradbury published several sermons bearing on the controversy, and in , "An answer to the reproaches cast on the dissenting ministers who subscribed their belief of the Eternal Trinity. By the 18th century many English Presbyterian congregations had become Unitarian in doctrine. A number of new Presbyterian Churches were founded by Scottish immigrants to England in the 19th century and later. Wales[edit] In Wales , Presbyterianism is represented by the Presbyterian Church of Wales , which was originally composed largely of Calvinistic Methodists who accepted Calvinist theology rather than the Arminianism of the Wesleyan Methodists. They broke off from the Church of England in , ordaining their own ministers. They were originally known as the Calvinist Methodist connexion and in the s it became alternatively known as the Presbyterian Church of Wales. Ireland[edit] Presbyterianism is the largest Protestant denomination in Northern Ireland and the second largest on the island of Ireland after the Anglican Church of Ireland ,[citation needed] and was brought by Scottish plantation settlers to Ulster who had been strongly encouraged to emigrate by James VI of Scotland, later James I of Ireland and England. An estimated , Scottish Presbyterians moved to the northern counties of Ireland between and the Battle of the Boyne in . Presbyterians, along with Roman Catholics in Ulster and the rest of Ireland, suffered under the discriminatory Penal Laws until they were revoked in the early 19th century. The Scots Kirk , which is English-speaking, and is attended by many nationalities. It maintains close links with the Church of Scotland in Scotland itself, as well as with the Reformed Church of France. The church was founded in the 12th century, and centuries later, after the Protestant Reformation, it adhered to Calvinist theology and became the Italian branch of the Presbyterian churches. As such, the church is a member of the World Communion of Reformed Churches. List of Presbyterian churches in North America Evolution of Presbyterianism in the United States Even before Presbyterianism spread with immigrants abroad from Scotland, there were divisions in the larger Presbyterian family. Some later rejoined only to separate again. The Church was organized by the Rev.

As a part of the programme, selected students travel to a partner country where they experience development work first-hand, alongside local leaders in a variety of settings. The programme also includes training, effective service opportunities and ongoing mentoring both within Australia and overseas. Year 9 achieved Distinctions. After the leadership change, students continued to be engaged in a vast array of programmes within the School, and to participate in various programmes beyond the walls of PLC. Students in Pre-kindergarten to Year 2 have daily classes in Music and French. It is no surprise then, that so many of our students participate competitively in the various language competitions on offer. Ballet classes were introduced for students in Kindergarten to Year 3. The little ones completed their first ballet exam and a performance in the Hazel Day Drama Centre to wrap up the year. PLC is very fortunate to have an exceptionally high standard of dance, a result of committed teaching staff, a variety of critically acclaimed local and international choreographers, tutors, and hard work and practice by the girls. The play explores themes of isolation and othering, and how they can lead to destructive and violent behaviour. The concept is used as an allegory for our society that increasingly isolates itself through social media escapism. The cabaret was a satirical investigation and critique of environmental issues confronting society today. The performance used music, dance and magic to explore renewable solutions for our world and was visually enlivened by yet another masterpiece in stage design by Rob Kelly. The set, a surreal deconstructed circus, was brought to life and enhanced by the steam punk style of costume design by Lizzie Davies. Mr Craze brought great imagination and directing skills to this show, and worked with two separate casts in order to maximise the number of girls able to participate in the creative and enjoyable journey of a Theatre Arts production. A highlight of the music calendar, this was a balmy night under the stars listening to beautiful music. In Term 2, the Chamber Concert was held at Christ Church Claremont with the repertoire choices suiting this special venue to perfection. The remainder of the term was filled polishing repertoire for the Orchestra, Band and Jazz Festivals. It was exciting to see students showcasing their musical prowess at the Junior and Senior School Arts Days. Working towards the Showcase and Spring concerts took up the first part of Term 3. These concerts were held in the Drama Centre and were a culmination of all the performances throughout the year. Both concerts were well received. String works for violin and cello were performed with orchestral accompaniment and for the first time in WA, there was a Year 12 ATAR bagpipe student. Chamber groups and soloists performed in gardens near the school at Open Garden Day. It was lovely to stroll through stunning gardens listening to beautiful music. Musicians love to perform and throughout the year there were instrumental and vocal recitals, chamber music concerts and many other performances by solos or groups. The Pipe Band had its usual busy year filled with many varied performances for either solo pipers or the entire Pipe Band. All ensembles in Term 4 were working towards Speech Nights, and starting to prepare for the start of Katherine Young one of our art teachers designed an image based on PLC and Peppermint Grove to be used for the banner. It was also shown with the other finalists in the Perth Cultural Centre walkway. Millie also took part in an interview by the Post newspaper to discuss her work. Students from these countries spent time undertaking reciprocal study at PLC and interacting with our students across both Junior and Senior School campuses. Our rowing girls continued their success on the water at Australian Open and Schools Rowing Championships in Sydney, achieving podium finishes. A variety of group tours were also available offering students subject, cultural, sporting and service immersion experiences. This OCA initiative puts the Year 12 students in contact with Old Collegians studying in areas where they have a mutual interest and hopefully smooth the transition to tertiary studies or into a job they are interested in. The night was a wonderful welcoming celebration, thanks to the tireless support from the committee and the generosity of a number of families. This Campaign created additional scholarships to help even more girls realise their potential. Taleisha was also selected to compete in swimming in the Pacific School games in Adelaide in December With the recipients of the Scholarships Fundraising Campaign, the PLC Foundation currently funds 13 scholarships for outstanding students whose families would otherwise find it out of reach to receive the lifelong benefits of a PLC education. These scholarships have been made possible through donations to the PLC Foundation Scholarship programme. In we welcome the following deserving recipients of this Scholarship: Taleisha finds time to contribute to the community by participating in charity fun runs and sausage sizzles.
